

FAA APPROVES GUMBO AIRPORT, STIPULATES BAR ON HOWELL PLAN

Engineer Says Project Can Proceed After Island Has Been Abandoned as a Possible Site.

The Federal Aviation Agency approved plans today for a secondary airport near Gumbo in St. Louis county, as proposed by Paul D. Haglin.

In a letter to Haglin, the FAA's district airport engineer, Robert W. Clark of Kansas City, said, however, that Howell island must be abandoned as a potential airport site before the Gumbo project can proceed. The Missouri river island has been proposed for possible airport development by County Supervisor James H. J. McNary.

Haglin told a reporter he would ask the county to withdraw Howell island from consideration "as soon as we can show our ability to obtain the financing to go ahead with final plans."

Asked whether the county would abandon the Howell island plan, McNary told a reporter he could not comment "until I hear directly from the FAA and consult with the County Council." McNary noted that he had endorsed Haglin's plan in principle and added that "the project deserves encouragement and support."

Field for Business Planes.

Haglin, an aeronautical engineer, is president of Haglin & Co., 111 South Bemiston avenue, Clayton, the firm organized to develop and operate the Gumbo airport. In a detailed prospectus, the firm has outlined plans for an airport for executive and business planes to be built in conjunction with an industrial park on a 107-acre tract on the south side of U.S. Highway 40. Cost of the project, exclusive of land purchase, is estimated at $7,955,450.

Clark's letter listed three other conditions that must be met before air traffic can use the Gumbo field, which Haglin proposes to call the Spirit of St. Louis Airport. These are:

1. Lobmaster Field, across U.S. Highway 40 from the Haglin site, must be abandoned.

2. Traffic patterns must not conflict with two small airports within a seven-mile radius, Arrowhead Airport and Creve Coeur Airport.

3. An approach from the southwest to the northeast must be provided in developing future instrument approach procedures for the field's projected 5100-foot runway.

Shift of Lobmaster.

Haglin foresaw no difficulty in meeting any of the conditions. Samuel D. Lobmaster, president and principal stockholder of the company operating Lobmaster Field, has told the St. Louis County Planning Commission and the FAA that he will move his operations to the new field when it is completed. The last two conditions can be handled in routine manner, Haglin said. Clark's letter said in part, "Your proposal to establish an airport has been determined acceptable to the Federal Aviation Agency. This determination includes consideration of safe and efficient use of air space."

Approval was given for operations under visual and instrument flight rules, although Haglin's firm had applied only for visual flight rules approval. Acceptance for instrument flight rules, Haglin said, "will make the airport more attractive to operators of large aircraft."

A request for a change of zoning for the airport-industrial park site is pending before the St. Louis County Council. The planning commission conducted a public hearing on the request last Feb. 21 but has not yet made a recommendation to the council. The FAA has called for re-establishment of additional secondary airports in the St. Louis area.

NOTICE

For a temporary period, it will not be possible to publish closing New York stock prices in this edition. Moving of the Post-Dispatch requires setting type in the new plant and printing the newspaper in the old plant on Olive Street. The delay in transporting matrices from one building to the other makes it a physical impossibility to publish the closing prices and still deliver the edition at the time buyers are accustomed to receive it. We hope Post-Dispatch readers will be understanding during this emergency.

MOVE TO BRING BUILDING CODE TO VOTE FAILS

Effort Made to Take Bill Away From Harris' Aldermanic Committee.

An effort to bring the proposed new city building code to the floor of the Board of Aldermen failed today by one vote after a heated debate lasting almost an hour.

A move to discharge the Public Safety Committee headed by Alderman Alfred I. Harris (Dem.), Twenty-second Ward, from consideration of the building code bill was made by President A. J. Cervantes. Harris attacked the proposal as being unprecedented.

The vote on the motion was 14-12 in favor, but Cervantes ruled that approval by a majority of the 29 members of the board was necessary to discharge a committee.

In other action, the board passed the final bill setting the stage for development of the downtown stadium project. The bill authorizes the Mayor and Comptroller to enter into agreement for the city with the Land Clearance for Redevelopment Authority and the Civic Center Redevelopment Corp.

Also, Mayor Raymond R. Tucker notified the board that he had signed the substitute school fire safety bill, passed by the board last week, which relaxed some requirements in the present code. The Mayor said his approval was on recommendation of Director of Public Safety Joseph P. Sestric and the

LEMAY WOMAN BEATEN BY 3 WHO INVADHER HOME

Men Force Way In When She Answers Doorbell — Friend Bound and Gagged.

Mrs. Rita A. Raabe, a widow, was beaten severely late yesterday by three young men who invaded her home at 9411 South Broadway, Lemay, and demanded to know where her money was hidden, she reported to police.

A friend, Mrs. Drucilla Hill, 12506 Alswell lane, Sappington, reported she also was terrorized by the youths when she arrived at the house while Mrs. Raabe was being held captive. Mrs. Raabe, 60 years old, was in St. Louis County Hospital today with a fractured cheekbone and multiple contusions of the face and body.

The women said the men were in the house for more than an hour and a half.

Mrs. Raabe, who has a financial interest in a bowling alley near her home, said the men forced their way into the house when she went to the door after the doorbell rang.

A man with a deep voice asked where she kept her money, she said, and began striking her on the face and body with his fists. One man stayed with her, she said, while the other two ransacked three rooms upstairs and three downstairs.

Mrs. Raabe became hysterical when relating the story, and police did not question her further. She said she kept no money in her home.

Mrs. Hill, a county clerical employee, said she had been in

G.O.P. STRATEGY SESSION MAKES BROAD ATTACK AGAINST TUCKER

Candidates Assail Merchants' Tax, Neighborhood Decay, Renewal Demolitions, Lack of Leadership.

The administration of Mayor Raymond R. Tucker was attacked vigorously last night in a strategy session of 11 of the 13 Republicans seeking city offices in the April 4 election. The meeting was held at the home of Ben H. Lindenbusch, G.O.P. candidate for Mayor, at 6471 Westway road.

In addition to Lindenbusch, those in attendance included Joseph M. Mahoney, candidate for Comptroller, and nine of the 11 Republican candidates in odd-numbered wards in which seats will be at stake in next month's election. No Republicans are running in the remaining three wards.

The candidates hammered hardest at the city's merchants and manufacturers tax, the decay of neighborhoods, demolition of areas for urban renewal, failure to erect a new chronic hospital and Tucker's alleged lack of leadership.

Assails Merchants Tax. Lindenbusch called the merchants and manufacturers tax grossly high. "It breeds and invites corruption," he said. The tax was blamed for the flight of small businesses from St. Louis and the difficulty in attracting new business.

"I speak as only one business man, but with 20 years' experience under the hammer of this tax," he declared. Mayor Tucker was criticized for not modifying this levy.

Lindenbusch sharply criticized demolition of buildings in such areas as the Mill Creek valley. He called the destruction "Hiroshima style" and assailed the time lag before the buildings will be replaced with income-producing properties.

"The ordinary taxpayer, the man on the street, is the one who will foot the bill for this," he said.

Mahoney, who will face incumbent John H. Poelker in the city election, likened St. Louis to a tree "one side bearing luscious fruit but the other side with bare branches and decay." He called this the facade of progress created by Tucker.

Alderman George J. Grellner, Thirteenth ward, assailed the present administration for its failure to construct a new chronic hospital. He noted that when this project was authorized in 1955 at a bond issue election, it received the greatest majority of any of the proposals. "Yet Mayor Tucker has refused to give this to the people," he declared.

Another candidate, Daniel T. Kearns of the Eleventh ward, contended that the proposed new chronic hospital was the influencing factor in getting the voters to accept the 1955 bond issue. He attacked the Mayor for having "his sights on the downtown area. He just can't see the needs and problems of any other section," he asserted.

Lester J. Crow, candidate in the Twenty-first ward, declared that the people of his area are becoming more and more concerned with the constant increase in taxes. The higher the taxes, the bigger government becomes and the further it gets from the people, he said.

305 MILLION BILL TO AID CHILDREN OF UNEMPLOYED VOTED BY HOUSE

Sent to Senate — Action Scheduled Before Easter on Minimum Wage, Depressed Areas.

WASHINGTON, March 10 (AP) — The House passed today a $305,000,000 aid bill for children of the unemployed. It was the second major measure in President Kennedy's economic program to win House approval.

The bill, passed by voice vote, now goes to the Senate. It would extend to children of the unemployed the federal-state benefits now available to children who lack support because of death, disability or desertion of the parent. As in these programs, the funds would be provided on a federal-state 60-40 matching formula.

Each state could choose to participate or not.

Unemployment Defined. In a concession to members who feared abuse of the program, the Ways and Means Committee wrote into the presidential proposal a stringent definition of unemployment as it was to be judged in connection with children's benefits.

To qualify for regular unemployment insurance, a wage earner is required to have lost his job and not to have refused suitable employment. But for the children's benefits, the bill would require the parent not to have refused without reasonable cause any employment which the administering state agency judged he could perform.

Chairman Wilbur Mills (Dem.), Arkansas, of the Ways and Means Committee said the maximum cost to the Government if all states participate is estimated at $305,000,000 but that he expects the actual expenditures to be less. The committee was told there is some doubt about the participation of 10 states.

The bill is a companion measure to one passed by the House last week, providing for extension up to 13 weeks of unemployment insurance benefits for persons who have been out of jobs so long they have used up their basic allotment.

Minimum Wage Bill.

House leaders today also scheduled action on President Kennedy's minimum wage and depressed areas bills before the Easter recess.

The House action came as the Senate agreed to restrict debate on the $394,000,000 depressed areas bill in hopes of bringing a final vote on the measure by the middle of next week.

Speaker Sam Rayburn said the House recess will be limited this year to a long weekend. It will start Thursday night before Good Friday and will continue until noon the following Wednesday.

Meanwhile, in the Senate the bill to rush more federal aid to the unemployed ran into new demands today for amendments. They could delay final congressional action which the Kennedy Administration wants by next week.

Senator John J. Williams (Rep.), Delaware, served notice at a Senate Finance Committee hearing he would offer two amendments to the measure and fight for their acceptance.

One, he said, would substitute

U.N. SAID TO KEEP MILK FROM CONGO HUNGRY CHILDREN

WASHINGTON, March 10 (AP) — Representative John F. Shelley (Dem.), California, said yesterday a shipment of milk to starving Congolese children is being delayed on orders of United Nations authorities in The Congo.

In a statement prepared for the Congressional Record Shelley said the transport Eltinge, operated by the United States Military Sea Transportation Service, arrived off the entrance to the Congo river Tuesday. The Eltinge carries 750 tons of powdered milk provided by the International Co-operation Administration for Congolese children.

Shelley said that the Eltinge was ordered by United Nations authorities to shift anchorage to a point where it would be out of sight of the beach because its presence "was causing unrest and alarm to the villagers."

"The Congolese children are presumably still starving," said Shelley, while "the relief for their hunger pangs sits in the Eltinge's hold less than 20 miles offshore."

A spokesman for the company said the belts were "strictly experimental."

SEAT BELTS FOR SCHOOL BUS GET NEW YORK TRYOUT

EAST MEADOW, N.Y., March 10 (AP)—New York state's first school bus equipped with seat belts was put into operation today.

U.N. Still in Dark.

The U.N. spokesman conceded the United Nations is uncertain who is wielding power in Stanleyville, but simply deals with whoever is available. He added that U.N. authorities have reason to believe Gizenga still is in Stanleyville.

Lundula was on a visit to the town of Kindu in Kivu province, the spokesman reported. He was there with the U.N.'s Brig. Steve Otis of Ghana to negotiate for release of 250 Europeans who are reported living there in extreme hardship. The rebel Kivu regime has refused to let the Europeans leave, saying their skills are needed.

11 KIVU LEADERS FREED FROM JAIL BY LUMUMBISTS

No U.N. Confirmation of Reports Gizenga Has Been Deposed at Stanleyville.

LEOPOLDVILLE, The Congo, March 10 (AP)—Eleven captured leaders of Kivu province have been released from a Stanleyville jail where they had been held since leftists seized their province last year, the United Nations said today.

Although this indicated a change in attitude by the rebel regime, the U.N. command was unable to confirm reports from Stanleyville that Moscow-backed Antoine Gizenga had been deposed there.

These reports said that either the rebel military commander, Gen. Victor Lundula, or President Jean Foster Manzikala of Oriental province had taken over. Both are considered firm supporters of the policies of the late ex-Premier Patrice Lumumba.

Both Opposed Reprisals. Both were reported to have taken vigorous measures to prevent reprisals against whites in Stanleyville after Lumumba's killing last month in anti-Lumumbist Katanga province. Manzikala also has strong tribal backing in Stanleyville, something Gizenga never had.

A U.N. spokesman reported the release of Jean Miroho, former president of Kivu, and 10 members of his provincial government from jail in Stanleyville.

Miroho had paid at least lip service to the central government at Leopoldville and had resisted pressure from Stanleyville in neighboring Oriental province to join up with Gizenga.

Gizenga sent in a raiding party last December, arrested Miroho and his officials, and took control of Bukavu, the provincial capital.

The U.N. spokesman conceded the United Nations is uncertain who is wielding power in Stanleyville, but simply deals with whoever is available. He added that U.N. authorities have reason to believe Gizenga still is in Stanleyville.

No Hat in Texas Is Big Enough For Names of Senate Candidates

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., March 10 (UPI)—An old Texas tradition fell by the wayside today because there are so many candidates in the special Senate race to fill Vice President Lyndon Johnson's former seat.

Bexar county officials usually put all the names of the candidates in a hat and draw them out to determine their place on the ballot. This year there are 71 candidates.

The biggest hat they could find yesterday belonged to Jimmy Knight, Democratic county chairman. It wasn't big enough, so officials used a waste basket.

WOULD FORM LOOSELY-KNIT FEDERATION WITH A SUPER-CABINET

Accord Reflects Views of Tshombe and Kalonji — Ghana President Warned to Keep Hands Off.

TANANARIVE, Malagasy Republic, March 10 (UPI)—The Congo's top leaders ended a stormy, nine-hour session last night by agreeing to recognize independent states within The Congo.

A formal announcement said the leaders had reached "agreement in principle on the recognition of existing states in fact and in law in The Congo and permitting the creation of new states."

The statement reflected the views of Katanga President Moise Tshombe and south Kasai chief Albert Kalonji. Each has proclaimed his area seceded from the central government and declared independent states.

It was apparent that Congo President Joseph Kasavubu and Premier Joseph Ileo were not too happy with the outcome.

Loose Federation. (The Associated Press reported that the Congolese leaders agreed on a loose federation of states in The Congo headed by a sort of super cabinet.

The program envisages a sort of "community of united nations," one delegate phrased it. Delegates said the states to be set up would participate in a common market in The Congo.

(The conference decided to set up a consultative committee of cabinet ministers drawn from each state to act as a sort of federal government responsible for economic, foreign and perhaps military affairs. This committee would screen and accept white advisers and technicians needed in The Congo. Where the present central government would fit into the picture was not clear.

2 Reported Accepted.

(It was reported that Tshombe's Katanga province and Kalonji's Mifing State of south Kasai have been accepted as members in the new Congo community. What other states are under consideration was not known. They would have to be carved from territory controlled either by Kasavubu's government or the area held by leftist Antoine Gizenga. Gizenga's regime claims control of Oriental province, Kivu province and part of Kasai—about one-third of The Congo.

(Delegates from western Kivu who claim independence from the leftist regime are represented here, along with tribal delegates from all over The Congo. The central government exercises control over Leopoldville province and Equator province to the north.)

Warning to Ghana Chief.

The delegates to the conference, which was marked by angry shouting and bitter arguments, bluntly warned Ghana President Kwame Nkrumah to keep his hands off their country.

They said in a statement that Nkrumah and "certain African personalities" are seeking to satisfy their personal ambitions at the expense of The Congo.

The conference said Nkrumah and others "allowed themselves to interfere directly in the internal affairs of The Congo and thus contribute to a deterioration of affairs."

In view of your repeated interference in Congo affairs," the Congolese told Nkrumah, "the conference authorities announce that they do not recognize your right to speak in the name of all Africa and formally deny your right to speak in the name of The Congo.

"The conference demands immediately that you observe neutrality on The Congo situation in order to help the Congolese people reach a solution of their problems themselves."

The leaders who fought ex-Premier Patrice Lumumba when he was alive also have denounced the United Nations and demanded it keep hands off The Congo until they could work out a solution themselves.

The agreement on recognition of independent states within The Congo said the existence of such states and the creation of new

AFRICAN BLOC PRESSING U.N. FOR IMMEDIATE CONGO DEBATE

Impatient Over Assembly Delay Caused by Hagglng on Whether to Take Up Cold War Issues.

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y., March 10 (AP)—African delegates to the United Nations General Assembly pressed today for immediate debate on the Congo as the big powers remained deadlocked over whether to take up cold war issues at the Assembly session.

Leaders of the African group, impatient over the haggling between Russia and the West that is delaying the Assembly, were trying to convince other delegates that since the Congo must be discussed, it should be discussed now.

The Africans argued that this would keep the Assembly moving and give the major nations time to work out some agreement on the agenda. Agreement at this stage appeared remote.

Diplomatic sources said Soviet insistence on a full-dress disarmament debate and reluctance of other nations to drop favorite issues may have doomed chances for the curtailment in the session proposed by chief United States delegate Adlai E. Stevenson.

Seeking Support.

No nation has yet asked that the Assembly take up The Congo, but Ghana and a number of other African nations are reported trying to muster support for a debate early next week. Yugoslavia, whose Foreign Minister, Koca Popovic, arrives today, is said to have thrown its support behind the move.

The Assembly has before it several Congo proposals. The latest was presented by President Kwame Nkrumah of Ghana at the reopening of the Assembly Tuesday.

Nkrumah wants the U.N. Congo operation put under a primary African command. He also called for departure of foreign diplomatic missions, expulsion of non-African personnel, disarmament of Congolese troops and freedom for all political prisoners.

Many states oppose Nkrumah's plan. Russia has proposed that all U.N. forces get out of the Congo within a month. The Soviet demand was defeated in the Security Council last month, but the Russians are expected to renew it in the Assembly.

Kasavubu Seeks Delay.

Early Assembly discussion of The Congo is opposed by Congo President Joseph Kasavubu and other Congolese political leaders now meeting on the island of Madagascar. They asked that the debate be held up to await the outcome of their conference. Their request is expected to have little effect on the African nations which supported the late Patrice Lumumba and now recognize the Stanleyville regime of Antoine Gizenga as The Congo's legal government. The chief nations of this group are Ghana, Guinea, Morocco, Mali and the United Arab Republic, with Nkrumah as their most vocal spokesman.

The Madagascar conference, which includes all The Congo's chief political leaders except Gizenga, sent Nkrumah a cable yesterday demanding that he stop interfering in The Congo's affairs.

The demands by Kasavubu's government for control of U.N. air traffic in The Congo and strategic bases occupied by U.N. forces provoked a sharp reminder from Secretary General Dag Hammarskjöld yesterday that The Congo government is pledged to allow the U.N. force full freedom of movement.

Hammarskjöld Message.

Hammarskjöld, in a message sent to Kasavubu, reportedly pointed out that the original Security Council resolution authorizing the U.N. operation in The Congo linked the maintenance of law and order there with the maintenance of international peace and security. Events in The Congo thus can no longer be thought of in "domestic or even provincial terms," Hammarskjöld said.

By United Press International.

Russia charged Portugal today with conducting a "regime of military and police terror" in its African territory of Angola.

Soviet Ambassador Valerian A. Zorin told the Security Council the Portuguese are "physically eliminating and persecuting Angolan patriots."

Later the Council, without a vote, agreed to put the question of Angola on its agenda for full debate. Portugal had opposed the action, contending the matter is an internal problem.

NAVY ABRUPTLY OUSTS SECURITY REVIEW CHIEF

WASHINGTON, March 10 (AP)—

The Navy's top security review officer was abruptly relieved of his post last yesterday, presumably because he approved publication of a magazine article calling strongly for more money for anti-submarine warfare as represented by the destroyer fleet.

The officer, Comdr. John James, confirmed that he had been replaced, but declined to discuss the circumstances. A veteran of 21 years of service, he said he will retire soon.

The Navy information office said, in reply to a query, that James "has not been relieved of all duties."

The Navy said James is remaining in the clearance review branch under an officer senior to him, who had been moved into the branch.

It added that this was "internal administrative action to strengthen the office."

No Comment on Article.

The new chief is Comdr. Merle McBain. There was no comment on the magazine article.

The Navy gave no immediate explanation for the change.

Informed sources, however, said James was blamed for passing an article that went against Navy policy and not for permitting any violation of security.

The article, by Lt. Marc A. Arnheiter, a young officer in the office of the chief of naval operations, appeared in Data magazine, a monthly publication specializing in Defense Department affairs.

Murray Queen-Smith, publisher and editor and a Navy veteran, said the article bore a Navy stamp, clearing it for publication, and added that "the story is good for the Navy."

The article was said to have aroused the anger of V. Adm. Robert B. Pirie, deputy chief of naval operations for air, who complained to Adm. Arleigh A. Burke, chief of naval operations. Burke, in turn, is reported to have taken the matter up with R. Adm. Daniel Smith, Navy chief of information.

Arnheiter, one of the few officers of the Naval Academy class of 1952 to be officially designated by the bureau of naval personnel as "qualified for command of destroyers" wrote that there is "room for grave doubt that the destroyer forces of the United States are currently capable of disposing of the Soviet submarine threat."

Arnheiter told of the frustration of destroyers which, in war games, locate and track enemy nuclear-powered submarines at long ranges and overtake the submarine, only to find their weapons "hopelessly inadequate" to deal with the quarry.

FAA ASKS PRIVATE PILOTS TO ATTEND SAFETY MEETINGS

WASHINGTON, March 10 (AP)—

The Federal Aviation Agency yesterday invited airplane pilots and owners to join in regional conferences starting next month on the rules and problems of safe flying.

Najeeb E. Halaby, FAA administrator, called the series air-share meetings, for "air your views, share the benefits."

The meetings will be conducted by the FAA bureau of flight standards, headed by Oscar Bakke. One of the conferences will be held at Hotel St. Nicholas in Springfield, Ill., April 27.

Halaby said the agency will attempt to anticipate the problems of general aviation—private and business flying—and to seek practical solutions.

Halaby said it is FAA's job to (1) help educate the 360,000 active private pilots to improve their skills, (2) provide improved navigation aids to help reduce the chance of pilot error and (3) make the rules that develop more exacting safety standards.

DETROIT ASKS OTHER CITIES TO BUY OFFICIAL AUTOS NOW

DETROIT, March 10 (AP)—Mayor Louis Mirani of Detroit wrote to 1500 fellow mayors yesterday urging them to buy new automobiles for their cities.

Mirani said that replacing worn official cars now instead of waiting until the start of the fiscal year July 1 "would help Detroit automobile firms and 400 assembly and parts plants all over the United States, creating employment for our people and your people as well."

The mayor suggested that car purchases by cities at this time "would tend to stimulate citizens to buy new cars now instead of waiting until their summer vacations." The industry has more than 1,000,000 unsold new cars.

ALLEGED COUNTERFEITING LEADER SEIZED IN HOUSTON

HOUSTON, Tex., March 10 (UPI)—

Secret Service agents and Houston police helped by a woman drug store clerk arrested early today a man identified as the leader of a nation-wide counterfeit ring and seized nearly $8000 in counterfeit $20 bills, along with three other suspects.

Lane Bertram, chief of the Houston Secret Service office, said officers arrested Fred Woolward Roberts in an apartment where he had been living with his wife and daughter.

Also arrested were William W. Canada, Lewis F. Canada and Wilburn Dean Martin. Bertram said Martin met Roberts early last month and agreed to pass the bills.

Agents got on the trail of the accused counterfeiters last night when Martin and the Canada brothers asked Mrs. C. T. Dixon, a clerk at a pharmacy, for a roll of camera film. They handed her a $20 bill, and Mrs. Dixon became suspicious when she asked them what type of film they wanted and one man said "any kind will do."

PACIFIST SENTENCED AGAIN

NEW HAVEN, Conn., March 10 (AP)—William Henry, a pacifist, received a one-year prison sentence yesterday for boarding the nuclear submarine George Washington without permission.

He was sentenced to a year in prison last month for a similar charge involving the nuclear submarine Ethan Allen. United States District Judge Robert P. Anderson said the new sentence would run concurrently with the old one.

U.S. ENVOY TALKS FOUR HOURS WITH SOVIET PREMIER

Thompson Voices Optimism After Delivering Message From President Kennedy.

MOSCOW, March 10 (AP)—United States Ambassador Llewellyn Thompson returned last night from a four-hour talk with Premier Khrushchev in Siberia, and said he was optimistic about the outcome.

Thompson told reporters he delivered a message from President Kennedy to Khrushchev at the Siberian city of Novosibirsk. The Premier, on a farm tour, had invited Thompson. Never before had Khrushchev permitted a diplomat to make such a journey.

Thompson said he met Khrushchev outside Novosibirsk for a session lasting two hours and 40 minutes. It was then he delivered the message from Mr. Kennedy. The Ambassador stayed on for a long luncheon.

"I suppose all told we were with him four hours," Thompson said. By "we" he meant himself and Boris Klauson, the United States Embassy's political officer.

Reports to Kennedy.

Thompson hurried to the United States Embassy, saying his analysis of the conversation with Khrushchev would be in Washington today. The Ambassador declined to say whether he had a message from Khrushchev, remarking only that "we had a discussion and I shall report that discussion."

Asked how he felt about the Siberian talks, Thompson said: "I have always been an optimist and always will be."

Mr. Kennedy's message was said to urge Khrushchev to speak as frankly to Thompson as he would to the President himself.

It expressed the hope that such talks could lead to an improvement in United States-Soviet relations.

(In London, an informed diplomatic source said Mr. Kennedy's message called for a clear definition of Soviet intentions in Laos. Mr. Kennedy was said to have emphasized that the United States wanted a united, independent, neutral Laos and denied Washington was interested in making the Asian kingdom a pro-Western military bastion.)

Russians Differ on Latest Space Feat's Effect on Manned Flight

They Disagree Whether Dog's Return From Orbit Has Solved Problem of Weightlessness.

MOSCOW, March 10 (UPI)—Two Soviet scientists disagreed today over whether Russia's newest feat—returning a dog safely from a space flight—has indicated that a man could make a similar trip soon.

The official Tass news agency quoted Prof. Vasil Parin of the Soviet Academy of Medical Sciences, "already we can presume that weightlessness is no danger to manned space flight."

Tass quoted the Institute of Experimental Biology's Prof. Ivan Miasnik: "Scientists are not yet unanimous in their conclusions on the effect of weightlessness on living organisms."

A third scientist indicated there might have been more than one four-legged animal aboard the five-ton space ship.

Broadcasting on the Moscow radio's home service, Prof. Erast Arsatyan, corresponding member of the U.S.S.R. Academy of Sciences, said: "I can report that our four-legged space travelers . . . are well."

Official announcements relating to the space shot so far have said only that Chernushka, a female dog, and other "biological objects" were aboard.

Parin claimed dogs were better than monkeys, which are used by the United States as space pioneers, Tass said.

Soviet scientists said dogs' trust in man is boundless and they keep calm in the most complex experiments. Monkeys, although superior mentally, are "nervous, excitable and try to wreck their scientific apparatus," he said.

The Moscow radio carried a flood of congratulatory messages from everybody from factory workers to intellectuals. The Soviet press also carried long articles on the experiment as well as comments from scientific circles.

The government newspaper Izvestia, which ordinarily publishes one edition a day put out an extra yesterday. The newspaper already was on the presses when the spaceship announcement was made.

The Tass announcement did not disclose how many times the spaceship orbited before returning to earth, nor did it refer to the means of propulsion.

It was the second known recovery of Soviet objects from space in four tries. The first one last August also returned living creatures, including two dogs.

Stevenson's side—"The imperialist circles of the United States."

"That little word 'vacuum' betrayed the speaker, lack, stock and barrel," Izvestia said. "We remember the context in which it was used by the Republican administration during the turmoil in the Arab world (in 1958)."

"We have not forgotten that it is the word that was the motto of the notorious 'Dulles-Eisenhower doctrine,' that it was written on the banners of American marines when they landed at most diverse points of the globe."

MENDERES IS CONVICTED OF USING TERROR TACTICS

YASSIADA, Turkey, March 10 (AP)—Ousted Premier Adnan Menderes and three former members of Parliament from his disbanded Democrat party were convicted today on the charge of using terror tactics to smother opposition at the town of Canakkale in 1959. Penalties on the charge range up to death.

Sentencing was put off until completion of the mass trial, which has been under way on this island in the Marmara sea since Oct. 14.

Those convicted with Menderes were Nuri Totay, Servet Sezgin and Ahmet Hamdi, all former deputies from Canakkale. State prosecutors charged Menderes ordered violent aggression against opposition members of Parliament in 1959 to prevent them from doing their duty.

U.S. SAYS IT ISN'T BOUND BY OLD BERLIN OFFERS

No Intention of Reducing Garrison There, State Department Announces.

WASHINGTON, March 10 (AP)—The United States said today it is "no longer bound" by compromise proposals previously offered the Russians in negotiations on Berlin.

A statement issued by the State Department declared also "unequivocally that the United States has no intention of reducing its garrison in West Berlin."

Press officer Lincoln White issued the Kennedy Administration's position after being questioned about Secretary of State Dean Rusk's remarks yesterday repudiating the United States to its commitment to a free West Berlin.

Means Start From Scratch.

In his statement, White said publicly for the first time what previously had been said privately in the Eisenhower Administration. This is that any new talks with the Reds will start from scratch—the old concessions are tossed out.

Concessions were offered by the United States, Britain and France at the 1959 Geneva foreign ministers conference with Russia on the German question. The Western proposal involved:

A pledge to keep a ceiling of 11,000 on Western troop strength in Berlin, consideration of reducing that garrison if developments warranted, equipment of the Berlin force only with conventional weapons and restraint on unfriendly activities such as propaganda and espionage.

Position On Troops.

"The Soviets having rejected the Western proposals, we have taken the position that we are no longer bound by these proposals with respect to any future negotiations with the Soviet Union on Berlin," White said.

He also said: "I would like to state unequivocally that the United States has no intention of reducing its garrison in West Berlin, and it seems to me that this was implicit in what the Secretary (Rusk) said."

The Kennedy Administration currently has underway a review of all major foreign policy issues, including Germany and Berlin.

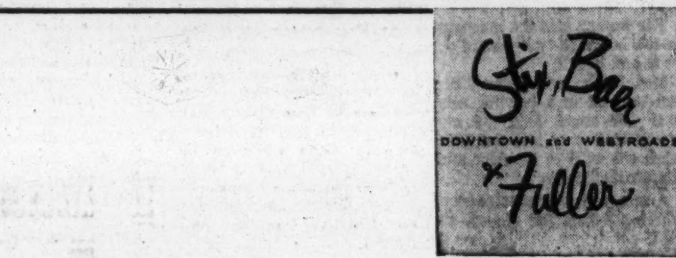

NAVY BOMBER IS FOUND IN LAKE, NO TRACE OF CREW

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., March 10 (AP)—

A Navy bomber which crashed last night in choppy Lake George was found by rescue teams today. Comdr. C. H. Boldt, directing the Navy search operations, said there was no trace of the eight crewmen reported aboard the craft.

Searchers found four airmen's crash helmets in the lake. The plane was sighted in 10 to 15 feet of water about 200 yards from a target ship in the Lake George bombing range. The lake was so choppy boats were unable to get close to the wreckage. Boldt said a navy diver would go down to the wrecked plane later.

The P2V patrol bomber plunged into the lake five miles west of Seville, Fla., in a night anti-submarine drill. Crew members of a second plane reported the crash. None of those missing was listed as from the St. Louis area.

2000 MORE AUTO WORKERS HERE LAID OFF, TOTAL RISES TO 6500

Fenton Chrysler Plant Will Shut Down for Week—G.M. Layoffs Were Announced Earlier.

One-week layoffs for 2000 additional automobile workers in the St. Louis area were announced today, bringing to 6500 the number of automobile production employees who will be out of work here next week because of a slackened demand for new cars.

Chrysler Corp. announced at Detroit yesterday that it would close six of its plants, including the Fenton plant, for the week to bring production in line with the demand for new automobiles.

Earlier, General Motors Corp. announced it temporarily was shutting down part of its operations at the Chevrolet and Fisher body plants in St. Louis and laying off about 4500 production workers for the week beginning Monday.

Ford Workers Out Now. Assembly plant workers of the Ford Motor Co. at Hazelwood have been idle this week but are scheduled to return to work Monday. The number of workers affected there is 1000.

Meanwhile, the city began yesterday to receive applications from needy persons for surplus food commodities which will be made available for distribution beginning April 15. Applications will continue to be received today and tomorrow at 24 schools and three housing project offices. A total of 1545 applications was received yesterday from persons whose last names begin with the letters A through G. Persons whose last names begin with the letters H through O were registering today. The remainder will register tomorrow.

Registrations will also be received at offices established by the city at 2331 Mullany street, Comptroller John H. Poelker said. This will accommodate those who were unable to register at places established for the initial registration.

Warehouse Leased. Distribution of the foods for which orders have been placed will be from a warehouse leased yesterday by the city at Ninth and Arsenal streets. Applicants will be notified when they are to call for the commodities.

The foods available for the first distribution include beans, rice, lard, butter, canned pork and gravy, dried eggs, dried milk, corn meal and flour.

Poelker announced the appointment yesterday of Joseph Pollock, 2020 Palm street, as director of the food distribution. He said that about five to seven employees will be at the Mullany street offices and 15 to 19 at the distribution warehouse.

Schools at which food applications are being received are: Gardenville, Blow, Cleveland, Roosevelt, Shepard, Gratiot, Adams, McKinley, Wyman, Humboldt, Vashon, Jackson, Hadley, Field, Sumner, Washington, Dozier, Walbridge, Ashland, Baden, Beaumont, Clay, Cole and Marshall.

Housing project residents may file applications at the home service visiting offices of the Carr Square-Vaughn, Peabody-Dagst-Webbe, Cochran and Igou-Fruit projects.

In addition to unemployed employees, the distribution of the surplus food commodities will be made to those who are receiving various forms of state relief payments. These persons need not register, Poelker said. They will receive certificates for the food directly from the Missouri Department of Welfare.

QUEEN PRAISES BRITISH SHIFT TO COMMONWEALTH

LONDON, March 10 (AP)—Queen Elizabeth II today praised the process which transformed Britain's colonial empire into the free association of commonwealth nations.

At a luncheon attended by commonwealth leaders, the Queen said she was deeply impressed with the warm and friendly greetings extended by India and Pakistan in her recent Asian tour.

Then, getting as close to a political topic as her position allows, the Queen said:

"There can be no doubt that the happiness and friendliness which we found throughout India and Pakistan was a triumphant vindication of the vision of the statesmen who changed the old empire into a free association of equals. . . . We have now a wonderful framework for co-operation in every field. It only remains to make full use of it."

CONDON ASSAILS TACTICS OF HOUSE ANTI-RED UNIT

The House Committee on Un-American Activities through its "hit-and-run, stab-in-the-back" tactics has done irreparable damage to scientific effort in the United States, Edward U. Condon, chairman of the physics department at Washington University, said yesterday.

Addressing a men's luncheon of the Jewish Community Centers Association at Miss Huling's Restaurant, 1105 Locust street, Condon said he was encouraged to see the start of a strong movement to abolish the committee. Reviewing several instances in which scientists moved to other countries after investigation by the committee, Condon said "not in one case was there a single, formal criminal charge against these scientists who are forced to remain away because of the committee's blacklist."

"I am ashamed when reading about various super patriot groups going around spreading Americanism," he said. "Instead we should start practicing Americanism and quit harassing perfectly decent people and valuable scientists." He told the group he was "perfectly happy to leave the uncovering of Communist subversion to the F.B.I." and not to the "judgment of irresponsible Congressmen."

2 MEN ROB LIQUOR STORE, LOCK 3 IN STOREROOM

Two employees of a 9-0-5 liquor store at 3149 Lucas avenue and a delivery man were locked in a storeroom today by two armed men who robbed the establishment of an undetermined amount of money, Joe Goldstein, manager, reported to police.

Goldstein said one of the men entered the store and bought a package of gum from Willie McLeod, a clerk-porter. When the second man entered, the first produced a revolver and held it on McLeod. The second robber went to the rear where Goldstein was and pointed a pistol at him.

The two employees then were locked in the storeroom. Goldstein said when they were in the room he overheard one of the men tell the other to "get the money from a metal box behind the counter." Paul Cavanaugh, a linen truck driver, also was locked in the storeroom after he entered the establishment.

LAST OF JAILED ELECTRICAL EXECUTIVES IS RELEASED

NORRISTOWN, Pa., March 10 (AP)—The last of seven electrical industry executives jailed for violations of the anti-trust law was released today.

John M. Cook, vice president of marketing for Cutler-Hammer, Inc., of Milwaukee, left Montgomery county prison five days before his 30-day term was to have ended. Four other executives had been freed 24 hours before and two on Tuesday.

In each case the jail sentence was shortened five days by Chief Judge J. Cullen Ganey of United States District Court for exemplary behavior.

3 YOUTHS IN AUTO ARRESTED AFTER CHASE, SHOTS, WRECK

Two 17-year-old youths and a 16-year-old were arrested early today after a chase which ended when their stolen automobile struck the rear of a building at 4801 West Pine boulevard.

Patrolman Sanford Sutfin, one of the pursuing officers, fired three shots as the occupants fled from the wrecked car. One of the 17-year-olds halted and was arrested. The other two were arrested by other officers who saw them running in the 4000 block of West Pine.

The latter two admitted stealing the car from a used car lot in the 5200 block of Natural Bridge avenue and putting on it a license plate stolen from a car belonging to Patrolman Clyde Fulham, 3401 Union boulevard.

TRUE MORSE URGES GRADUAL SHIFT IN ADMINISTRATION

A more gradual transition from one administration to another in the Federal Government—particularly among top policy-making jobs—was urged here yesterday by True D. Morse, Under Secretary of Agriculture in the Eisenhower Administration.

Addressing the Rotary Club of St. Louis at the Statler-Hilton Hotel, Morse said: "I walked into my Washington office in 1954 and walked out in 1961, before my successor had even been chosen."

He urged business and professional men to participate actively in government and politics "or face the risk of leaving the government in the hands of those who would exploit it for their own self-interest."

WOMAN FOILS HOLDUP AT BAKERY IN LEMAY

Mrs. Muriel Lewis, a clerk in the Alfred Mueller Bakery, 285 Lemay Ferry road, Lemay, foiled a robber last night when she disregarded his order to "put the money in a bag" and ran for help.

Mrs. Lewis told St. Louis county police the man ordered a half-dozen doughnuts and put a $1 bill on the counter before displaying a revolver and demanding money. She ran down a corridor to the rear and up a stairway to the Mueller living quarters, calling for help.

Mueller, arming himself with a revolver, hurried to the store, but the man had fled, along with the doughnuts and his dollar.

GUILFOIL SAYS HE, HOLLORAN PUT UP FUNDS

Asserts Their 'Loans' Financed Most of Campaign — Denies Teamster Gift.

The almost successful campaign of Mark R. Holloran, Democratic national committeeman for Missouri, for the Democratic nomination for Mayor was financed largely through "loans" from Holloran and Thomas J. Guilfoil, his campaign manager, Guilfoil said today.

Guilfoil said contributions received from supporters came to about $4000. Holloran lost to Mayor Raymond R. Tucker by only 1272 votes.

"The rest of the money spent on the campaign was raised through loans from Mr. Holloran and myself," Guilfoil said. He said he could not estimate the total expenditures at this time but said they had resulted in a "very substantial deficit."

"It is our intention to solicit every known source of Democratic contributions in an effort to make up the deficit which, otherwise, will have to be made up by Mr. Holloran and myself," Guilfoil said.

Asked whether there was any substance to reports circulating among Tucker supporters that the Teamsters Union had contributed to the campaign, Guilfoil stated flatly:

"We received no contributions from the Teamsters."

To the further question whether the Teamsters would be asked for gifts to help erase the deficit, Guilfoil said he did not want the union involved in this matter.

Holloran told the Post-Dispatch yesterday that some of the money used in his campaign came from friends and other persons who simply wanted to see Tucker retired from the mayor's office. Some funds were borrowed, he said.

"I have about $7000 in bills lying on my desk right now that I have to pay," Holloran said. "It is true that I had a lot of workers, but they were not organization workers—they were people who wanted to see Tucker ousted."

Guilfoil said he expected to file a financial report on the campaign as soon as possible, "possibly within a few days."

EX-CONVICT SENTENCED TO 7 YEARS FOR ROBBERY

James McKissic, a former convict, was found guilty of armed robbery today by a jury in the court of Circuit Judge Michael J. Scott. Judge Scott fixed the penalty at seven years in the penitentiary under the habitual criminal act.

Police testified that McKissic, 5300 block of Northland, was a "plant" in a liquor store at 5307 Easton avenue, where three other men robbed the establishment of $12 last Dec. 24.

When arrested, police said McKissic admitted he was part of the gang. He testified he had no part in the robbery.

MUELLER FOUND GUILTY IN BANK ENTERING CASE

Hoodlum and Former Wortman Associate Freed on Bond Pending Sentence.

Kenneth C. Mueller was at liberty under $15,000 bond today pending sentence, after being found guilty yesterday of illegally entering the Union National Bank, 200 Collinsville avenue, East St. Louis, last Jan. 2.

A jury of six men and six women returned the verdict in United States District Judge William G. Juergens's court at East St. Louis after two and one-half hours' deliberation. The court granted Mueller 15 days to file a motion for a new trial.

Mueller, hoodlum and former associate of Frank (Buster) Wortman, East Side racket boss, did not take the witness stand and there was no other defense testimony.

East St. Louis policemen, testifying at the start of the trial last Tuesday, told the jury of seeing Mueller near the rear of the bank late at night and of capturing him several blocks away after a chase on foot.

A short time later the bank was found to have been entered and burglar tools were found beside a vault, the door of which had been burned through with an acetylene torch. A key which Mueller dropped when being questioned proved to fit the bank's front door.

A Federal Bureau of Investigation expert testified that the key apparently had not been copied directly from any of the 20 keys carried by bank employees, but the witness described five methods by which the key could have been produced.

Another FBI man testified that steel particles scraped from Mueller's clothing matched particles taken from around the bank vault.

Employees of a St. Louis construction company where Mueller formerly worked identified an oxygen tank regulator found outside the vault as the property of the firm.

Maximum penalty is 20 years in prison and a $5000 fine. Mueller, 28 years old, lives in the 2900 block of Wyoming street, St. Louis.

TUCKER PRAISES KENNEDY'S URBAN RENEWAL PLANS

President Kennedy's multi-billion-dollar housing and urban renewal program and his proposal for a Cabinet department of housing and urban affairs were praised yesterday by Mayor Raymond R. Tucker.

The program, if enacted, "will provide a tremendous boost to the solving of key urban area problems," the Mayor said.

"The President has fulfilled the Democratic party platform pledge of a Department of Urban Affairs and increased federal money for urban renewal."

Tucker pointed out that he had long advocated programs for both low and middle income housing, as urged by the President.

"He has wisely emphasized rehabilitation as well as renewal, and his approach would bring the over-all federal housing program into better balance," Tucker said. "I hope the Congress will support President Kennedy's program."

IT'S PEDESTRIAN WHO PAYS

LONDON, March 10 (UPI)—A pedestrian was ordered in London high court to pay damages to two motorcycle riders, Michael Dixon and his wife, Patricia, accused Anthony Quinn of dashing in front of their cycle. They both fell off.

Quinn was ordered to pay damages and costs totaling $1288. Quinn won $140 damages, with costs, on a counter-claim against Dixon for the injuries he received.

HANDCUFFED MAN LEAPS FROM WINDOW

Escapes From Police After Narcotics Raid—Rearrested Later Still Manacled.

A handcuffed suspect escaped temporarily from narcotics squad detective early today by leaping through a second story window of a home in the 6000 block of Bartmer avenue, police reported.

Later, the detectives rearrested the man, Highland Johnson, 26 years old, at his home in the 5600 block of Maple avenue. He was still handcuffed. Police took him to Homer G. Phillips Hospital where he was treated for minor cuts.

Johnson was one of seven men and three women arrested in a series of three narcotics raids. All were booked suspected of violation of the federal anti-narcotics act.

Detective Fred Akiki, a member of the narcotics squad, had posed as an addict and had made several purchases of marijuana from Johnson earlier, police said. He had arranged to be arrested with Johnson. When police had both men handcuffed together, Johnson, still unaware of Akiki's identity, was persuaded to take the arresting officers to the house on Bartmer avenue, police said.

STORE OWNER FOUND DEAD, PISTOL HANGING ON THUMB

Richard J. Theis, 48 years old, was found dead yesterday in the rear of his store, the Diamond Egg and Poultry Co., 7014 South Broadway. He had been shot in the chest and a revolver was hanging from his right thumb.

An employee, John Moore, told police he returned from making a delivery and found the doors of the store locked. He forced a door and discovered the body of Theis in a chair.

Police said Mrs. Theis told them he had been under medical care for a nervous condition. He was worried about business conditions, she said.

G. F. REINHARDT, ENVOY TO U.A.R., MOVED TO ITALY

WASHINGTON, March 10 (AP)—President Kennedy today chose G. Frederick Reinhardt, now envoy to the United Arab Republic, to be ambassador to Italy.

Reinhardt, 49 years old, has been in the foreign service for 25 years.

Last month the White House announced that he would stay on as Ambassador to the United Arab Republic and as Ambassador to Yemen.

Asked today why Mr. Kennedy had changed his mind and decided to transfer Reinhardt to Italy, White House press secretary Pierre Salinger said his only information was that the switch was made after study of the situation.

Fluent in Italian. Reinhardt speaks Italian fluently. He was born in Berkeley, Calif. He went to school in Switzerland, attended the University of California and Cornell University and then studied in Italy.

Reinhardt entered the government service in 1935 and was appointed a foreign service officer in 1937. His first post was vice consul in Vienna.

Later, before World War II, Reinhardt served in the then independent Baltic states and in Moscow. During the war he was a political adviser to top ranking military leaders in the European theater including Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower. After the war he served at the Atlantic alliance's defense college in Paris.

In 1945 Reinhardt returned to Moscow as a first secretary. In 1948 he became chief of the Division of Eastern European Affairs and was named in 1950 director of the Office of Eastern European Affairs.

Between 1955 and 1957 Reinhardt was ambassador to Viet Nam, served for a time as counselor of the Department of State and in January, 1960 was named Ambassador to the U.A.R.

He is married to the former Lillian Larke Tootle. They have four children.

President Kennedy yesterday named Harold Brown, a nuclear physicist and expert on nuclear weapons, to be director of research and engineering for the Department of Defense.

negotiations at Geneva in 1958-59.

He will succeed Dr. Herbert F. York, a former director of the University of California's Radiation Laboratories, who will become dean of the University's San Diego branch.

Test Bar Negotiator. President Kennedy formally appointed Arthur Dean, a veteran negotiator with the Communists, to head the United States delegation to the Nuclear test bar talks, which will be resumed March 21.

Dean represented the United States at the Korean war truce negotiations with the Chinese Communists. He was the personal choice of John J. McCloy, President Kennedy's adviser on disarmament policies.

President Kennedy nominated Robert Forbes Woodward, a State Department career officer who is presently Ambassador to Uruguay, to be Ambassador to Chile.

It was learned that the President plans to appoint John Everest of the Ford Foundation to be Ambassador to Burma, where he has represented the foundation in the past.

Other presidential appointees named yesterday were John W. Tuthill of the State Department to be alternate United States representative to the Organization for European Economic Co-operation, and Maj. Gen. Melvin J. Maas, U.S.M.C. (Ret.), for another term as chairman of the President's Committee on Employment of the Physically Handicapped.

RUSSIAN FOREIGN TRADE RISE

MOSCOW, March 10 (AP)—The newspaper Soviet Trade said yesterday Russia's foreign trade increased 27 per cent in the first two years of the seven-year plan beginning in 1959.

It said a further increase in the near future is indicated by agreements concluded at the end of last year and the first of this year.

MEANY CALLS CROSS PENSION PLAN ROBBERY

WASHINGTON, March 10 (AP)—AFL-CIO president George Meany said yesterday a plan to pay a union official $250,000 to quit while he is charged with corruption is "a clear case of legalistic highway robbery."

Meany said he was aghast at the proposed settlement in United States District court here of a case brought by fellow union officials against James G. Cross, president of the Bakery and Confectionery Workers International Union. A hearing on the proposed settlement is scheduled March 29.

"Under the terms of this proposal Cross will receive a lump sum payment of about $250,000 and will be guaranteed indemnification for any damages and all the costs of any legal actions that might ultimately arise because of his actions as president of this union," Meany's statement said.

"This is an unconscionable proposal. It violates every shred of human decency."

Arthur J. Goldberg, Secretary of Labor, ordered an investigation of the proposed Cross settlement as one of his first acts on taking office. The Labor Department said yesterday the investigation is still in progress.

Meany said Cross's union was expelled from the AFL-CIO "for failure to remove Cross from the presidency because of a long list of documented and proven instances of improper activities repugnant to trade union morality."

The case now in court was brought by officials of Cross's union, banded together as the "Local Unions Reunification Committee." It contains sworn complaints that Cross "misappropriated and misused the funds and property of the union to his own private and personal profit."

"I just can't understand,"

Meany said, "how so-called labor leaders and so-called labor lawyers could instigate such a case and then agree to a settlement which rewards the defendant for the very act complained of."

The proposed settlement, under which Cross would agree to resign, has been explained as a liquidation of accumulated pension rights. Under the settlement the union would pay any legal costs and waive any damages that might be ultimately assessed against Cross.

The union activities of Cross were the subject of extensive hearings by the Senate Labor Rackets Committee. Expulsion of the union from the AFL-CIO followed.

2 ROBBERS PLEAD GUILTY, GET 7- AND 8-YEAR TERMS

Milton H. Gatlin, 19-year-old laborer, was sentenced today to seven years in the penitentiary on each of three charges of armed robbery by Circuit Judge Ivan Lee Holt Jr. on his plea of guilty. The sentences are to run concurrently.

An accomplice in the robbery last Jan. 14 of a barbecue stand at 1310 North Leffingwell avenue, Leroy Buckley, 23, was sentenced to concurrent eight-year prison terms on his plea of guilty. Buckley, 5100 block of Maple avenue, also was charged with robbing a cafe operator at 1309 North Leffingwell of $3 last Jan. 15 and with assault with intent to rob last Jan. 21 when he was disarmed when attempting to rob an operator of a grill at 1008 North Whittier street.

Gatlin, 2900 block of Lucas avenue, was charged with the barbecue stand robbery in which $28 was taken and with robbing a grocery at 3101 Cass avenue of $20 last Feb. 16 and another grocery at 2801 Cass of $295 last Feb. 15.

visors at Belleville last Saturday. Touchette heads a Democratic faction which opposed Waller's nomination for circuit clerk in the primary election last April.

Other aldermanic candidates in attendance were Frank A. Zein, First ward; Benjamin Kolbenchlag, Third ward; Dr. Kelsie O. Pylant, Seventeenth ward; Joseph J. Hanes, Twenty-third ward; incumbent Joseph B. McDonald, Twenty-fifth ward, and Joseph H. Kleine, Twenty-seventh ward.

G.O.P. Officials.

The meeting was attended also by Michael Joseph Hart, chairman of the Republican City Central Committee; Francis C. Corley, Republican national committeeman for Missouri; and Mrs. M. Stanley Ginn of Columbia, the national committeewoman. Mrs. Ginn headed a special workshop for the wives of candidates.

In another talk last night, Lindenbusch, told the St. Louis Young Republicans Club meeting at the Chase Hotel that last Tuesday's primary election was a clear indication that the people of St. Louis want a change.

He noted that 53 per cent of the voters cast their ballots for candidates other than Mayor Tucker. "These are times that call for strong actions by a strong mayor," he said. The time is right to fight for an election we can win.

"The time is right to demonstrate to the citizens of St. Louis that Republican leadership can revive our city politically, economically, socially and culturally," he added.

Senator Barry Goldwater of Arizona will address a $100-a-plate Republican dinner, which will begin at 6:30 p.m. Tuesday in the Gold Room of the Sheraton-Jefferson Hotel. Part of the proceeds will be used in the city election.

Goldwater's appearance will be part of a national Republican program aimed at increasing the G.O.P. vote in large cities.

Lindenbusch, Corley and Mrs. Ginn will speak at the dinner, as will Lem T. Jones of Kansas City, finance chairman of the state party organization, and United States Representative Thomas B. Curtis of Webster Groves.

About 800 persons are expected to attend.

KENNEDY IN-LAW HIRED AS FOREIGN LOAN ADVISER

The New York Herald Tribune Post-Dispatch Special Dispatch

WASHINGTON, March 10—Stephen E. Smith, who is married to the President's youngest sister, Jean, has been hired by the Development Loan Fund, it was learned yesterday.

(The Associated Press said today the White House confirmed today that Smith is a consultant in the fund.)

(The rate for Smith's job is $50 a day, for days when the jobholder works, but the White House said Smith is not taking the pay.)

He has an office and a secretary at the fund, which is a division of the International Co-operation Administration, the agency that administers foreign aid funds.

Administration sources said Smith has been cleared for a permanent post at the Development Loan Fund, which lends money and guarantees private capital loans for projects in newly developed areas of the world.

Smith went to work at the fund office shortly after returning from a vacation in Switzerland with his wife last month.

Last Saturday President Kennedy named R. Sargent Shriver, another brother-in-law, to head the new Peace Corps. There is no pay for that job.

The President's brother, Robert F. Kennedy, is Attorney General of the United States.

Smith, heir to a New York tugboat and barge fortune, married Jean Kennedy in 1956. He came to Washington in 1959 and opened Senator Kennedy's first presidential campaign office.

COMMITTEE VOTES TO END TRUJILLO SUGAR 'WINDFALL'

WASHINGTON, March 10 (UPI)—The House Agriculture Committee approved today a sugar bill extension that knocked out favored treatment for the Dominican Republic on all non-quota purchases. The bill provided also for extra purchases from those countries which agree to buy American agriculture products.

The bill extended the Sugar Act for 21 months and gave no increase in American beet sugar production. Representative Harold Cooley (Dem.), North Carolina, chairman of the committee, promised, however, he would hold hearings on a permanent bill in May.

The committee acceded to demands of the Administration that Congress reallocate "windfall" sugar profits that would have accrued to the Dominican government of Rafael Trujillo.

BAR ON TOOL EXPORT TO RUSSIA EXPANDED

© New York Times News Service
WASHINGTON, March 10—The United States has clamped down further on exports of machine tools to the Soviet Union, it was reported yesterday.

Representative Glenard P. Lipscomb (Rep.), California, reported the latest cancellation of an export license. It involved a license issued last year for the sale of $6,000,000 worth of tools for making gears, cylinder heads and blocks for automobiles, trucks and farm machinery.

Lipscomb had been pressing the Commerce Department for the cancellation. The name of the firm involved was not made public.

Last week a license to export $1,500,000 worth of machinery for making ball bearings was canceled. Both cancellations were based on a new finding that the exports would give the Russians technological advantages which now are exclusively American. In a related development, reliable sources reported yesterday that the United States is expected to lift its bar on imports of crab meat from the Soviet Union. The bar is based on a Treasury finding in 1951 that the crab meat is produced by slave labor.

In 1959 the United States imported $7,900,000 in crab meat, principally from Japan.

vited to have dinner with Mrs. Raabe. A young man opened the door, and pulled her inside after she rang the doorbell, she said.

The man bound her hand and foot with cord cut from a veneer blind, Mrs. Hill said, and gagged her after threatening to kill her if she looked at him. She could hear Mrs. Raabe pleading with a deep-voiced man upstairs, she said.

Mrs. Hill said the men took $18 and jewelry worth $380 from her, and finally left after cutting the telephone wires. She managed to free herself, she said, and went to a neighbor's house to call police.

Mrs. Robert C. Treiman, wife of a physician, reported to police that she surprised two burglars in her home at 7 Radnor road, Fromentac, when she drove into her garage about 5 p.m. yesterday.

Mrs. Treiman said she first noticed an old blue automobile parked in the two-car garage, which adjoins the kitchen. A man was standing in the kitchen doorway, she said, with the Treiman television set at his feet.

Quickly backing out of the garage, Mrs. Treiman drove to the home of a neighbor and summoned police. Neighbors said two men drove away in the blue car before police arrived.

The burglars had left the television set, typewriter, silverware and clothing in a pile in the kitchen. A revolver was missing from a bedroom. Mrs. Treiman, who said she had left the kitchen door unlocked, is president of the Scholarship Foundation of St. Louis.

ones must be based on geographic and economic considerations.

The announcement said the matter would be discussed in detail at a forthcoming Elisabethville roundtable conference sponsored by Tshombe, but it said they were only recognizing a "well known fact" in recognizing independent states and said these

Wielding Spades in Mill Creek Valley

"exert actual power in an effective manner."

The conference here has been boycotted by Gizenga, political heir to Lumumba, and it was doubted he would attend the Elisabethville conference suggested by Tshombe for the end of the month.

Federation Advocated.

By the Associated Press. Both Kasavubu and Tshombe long have contended that a federation is the only type of government that will work on the present tribal basis in the Congo.

As to the economic basis of any new Congo states, some of the conference delegates have made direct approaches for material aid from Tshombe, who has in Katanga the key mineral riches of the country. Tshombe has said such matters would be discussed later.

Virtually all delegates want to establish a common front to freeze out leftist Gizenga. Their strategy is to trim him down to the leader of an insignificant minority and have him treated by the U.N. as a rebel.

The delegates were angered by his failure to show up at the conference. They now have accepted M. Bondeke as the representative of Oriental province. Bondeke arrived unobtrusively after the conference began, but was seated as a delegate.

The delegates point out that Gizenga does not belong to the Stanleyville area where he has been attempting to rule, and did not even belong to Lumumba's party though he served in the Lumumba government.

Fog in England Stops Autos.

LONDON, March 10 (AP)—The winter's worst fog blanketed southern England last night, disrupting train service and stalling highway traffic.

Jobless Aid

pay-as-you-go financing of the program for the deferred financing plan the House-passed measure now proposes. He proposed a four-tenths of one per cent increase in the employers payroll tax to be made effective on 1961 payrolls instead of starting next year.

His second amendment would forbid any unemployed person to receive unemployment compensation while drawing Social Security or pension benefits.

Goldberg Against Both.

Secretary of Labor Arthur J. Goldberg appealed to the committee to reject the amendments in the interests of speed. He said he also has other objections to both of them, but that "time is of the essence" in helping jobless family heads whose benefits under the existing law have been exhausted. It was Goldberg's third day of testimony at the hearings.

Any amendments accepted by the Senate would send the bill into a Senate-House conference and further delay final passage.

Senator Harry F. Byrd (Dem.), Virginia, announced the committee would meet behind closed doors Tuesday to consider Williams' and other proposed amendments. He had planned previously to start these sessions Monday.

Byrd did not explain the day's delay, but Goldberg told reporters he has not yet been able to compile batches of statistical matter the committee had requested to guide its decisions.

Douglas Charges Obstruction.

By United Press International. Senator Paul H. Douglas (Dem.), Illinois, during hearings yesterday accused critics of the measure of engaging in a "sit-down or slowdown to delay passage of this bill."

Chairman Byrd, however, said all facets of the issue should be thoroughly reviewed. "I am opposed to federalizing these state unemployment programs," he said.

The House-approved measure would provide extended weekly jobless payments equal to half of the regular benefits paid by the state. The extra compensation would go to workers who have exhausted their regular benefits.

However, it would be limited to a maximum of 13 weeks and no state could pay more than a total of 39 weeks in unemployment compensation.

Thus, a state with 20 weeks of payments now would receive an extra 10 weeks. Those with 26 weeks—the national average—would get 13 weeks. States now providing their jobless with 30 weeks, would receive nine extra weeks of benefits.

The national average unemployment payment is about $32 a week.

Estimates Demanded.

By the Associated Press. Several Senate committee members demanded a detailed estimate as to whether some states would contribute more than they get back, and others get back more than they contribute.

Goldberg testified yesterday that about $100,000,000 of the one billion dollars the bill would raise through an employers' payroll tax would not reach any of the intended beneficiaries.

A row erupted over questions submitted through an intermediary by Senator Carl T. Curtis (Rep.), Nebraska, as to whether Walter P. Reuther, president of the United Auto Workers, had induced Michigan automobile manufacturers to lay off additional men last month with the idea of inflating the unemployment totals in the hope of benefiting that state.

Goldberg angrily said it was inconceivable that Reuther would have made such a request or that the manufacturers would have granted it. He said no state could benefit from such a deal.

Reuther, in a telegram to the committee, said "the allegation

ST. LOUIS POST-DISPATCH Fri., March 10, 1961 7A of Senator Curtis is downright false."

In Detroit, spokesmen for General Motors, Ford and Chrysler denied the charge.

Goldberg had not yet answered a question as to whether one more emergency bill to supplement the regular program of aid to the jobless might be proposed.

The Secretary replied that he was worried about the future. He said, "If we emerge from this one (recession) as we did in 1958, we may emerge with an unemployment rate near 6 per cent, not very far from where we are now, which would be very bad for the country."

Goldberg will tour areas of heavy unemployment in Wisconsin and Minnesota next Tuesday and Wednesday.

The bill to aid depressed areas came under some attack in the Senate.

Opposed by Committee Head.

Senator A. Willis Robertson (Dem.), Virginia, chairman of the Senate Banking Committee, led the opposition in Senate debate yesterday. He said the depressed areas measure would "give false hopes to those who look to it for economic salvation."

Robertson, whose committee approved the program, said it was based on "the fallacious proposition that business is attracted by low-cost opportunities for production rather than by high-profit opportunities for distribution."

The measure proposes federal aid for depressed areas in retraining workers for new jobs and attracting new industries.

Senator Douglas said he did not contend the bill would provide jobs for everyone in chronically jobless areas, but "something must be done and the best thing is to provide work."

He added that the bill is designed to help poverty-stricken rural areas as well as urban industrial areas.

Senator Thomas J. Dodd

(Dem.), Connecticut, agreed the program "may fail—I don't think it will—but even if it does that is no reason for not trying. I favor federal action to save people, to save families, to save communities."

He said the problem of areas of persistent unemployment "is national in scope and defies the solutions of local and state governments."

TWO UNIVERSITIES, HOSPITAL GET U.S. RESEARCH GRANTS

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, March 10—Federal grants for research in various aspects of aging have been awarded to Washington University School of Dentistry, Jewish Hospital of St. Louis and the University of Missouri, it was announced yesterday.

A grant of $13,967 was awarded to Jewish Hospital for research conducted by Robert Goldstein on electrophysiologic tests of hearing. Washington University dental school received $12,627 for studies by John R. Ring on age changes in oral tissues.

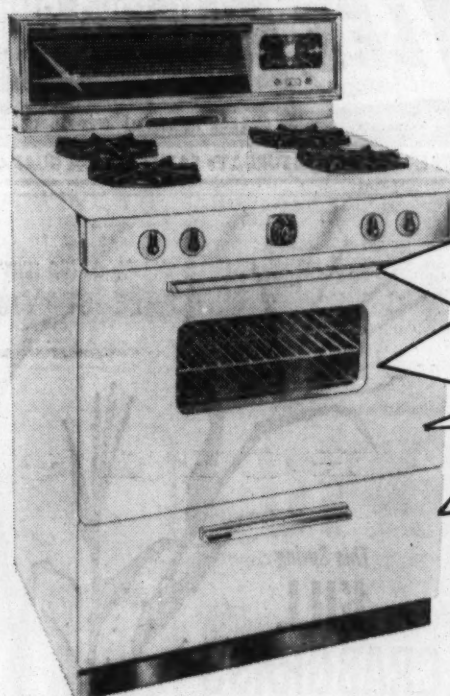

The University of Missouri received two grants totaling $20,345 for research conducted by Harold D. Johnson and Bertis A. Westfall. The grants were among 64 awarded by the National Institutes of Health for Studies of Aging.

WEST VIRGINIANS TO VOTE IN '62 ON LIQUOR BY DRINK

CHARLESTON, W. Va., March 10 (AP)—West Virginians will decide next year whether they want to legalize liquor by the drink. Since the repeal of prohibition, the state has operated package liquor stores, with all other liquor sales barred.

The State Senate yesterday approved 24 to 8 a resolution that puts the question on the 1962 ballot. The House previously had passed the resolution 67 to 31.

2 YOUTHS CAUGHT IN STOLEN CAR AFTER CHASE UNDER FIRE

Two youths were captured in a stolen automobile early today after a two-mile chase in which Granite City, Madison and Venice policemen fired several shots. Some of the slugs struck the car.

Two Madison policemen first saw the stolen machine at Fourteenth street and Madison avenue. The driver speeded up and began a circuitous route through the Tri-Cities. Venice police finally forced him to a halt in an alley near State and Market streets, in Madison.

The youths identified themselves as Robert E. Garner, 18 years old, 1200 block of Washington avenue, and Charles T. Howland, 17, 1400 block of Seventh street, both of Madison. Police said they are on probation. Both declined to make statements and were booked suspected of automobile theft and burglary.

indorsement of fire underwriter agencies.

'Highly Irregular' Action.

In presenting his motion to discharge Harris's committee, Cervantes said he realized such action was "highly irregular." He added, however, that today was the 154th day since the new code was referred to the committee. "So much depends on passage of this code," he asserted.

The proposed new code, known as a performance code, would differ from the present code in that it would not spell out precisely what materials must be used for various types of construction. The Bricklayers' union has been the chief opponent of the proposed code.

The St. Louis Labor Council and contractors and developers have indorsed the code, contending its enactment will help improve construction here and consequently mean more jobs.

Interest in City.
Cervantes said he was motivated to try to bring the bill to the floor by his interest in development of the city, by the necessity of providing employment opportunities at this particular time of economic distress and in the interest of orderly procedure in the Board of Aldermen.

Had the motion carried, the proposed code would have been on the floor for any action the aldermen desired.

Voting for discharging the committee were Aldermen Louis Abboussie (Dem.), Ninth ward;

Archie Blaine (Dem.), Sixth ward; William Clay (Dem.), Twenty-sixth ward; Harold I. Elbert (Rep.), Twenty-eighth ward; James E. Geisler (Dem.), Tenth ward; George J. Grellner (Rep.), Thirteenth ward; Fred W. Haag (Rep.), Twelfth ward; Joseph W. Martino (Dem.), Eighth ward; Joseph B. McDonald (Rep.), Twenty-fifth ward; John A. Sartorius (Dem.), Twenty-third ward; Wayman F. Smith Jr. (Dem.), Eighteenth ward; Albert Villa (Dem.), Eleventh ward; Lawrence Woodson (Dem.), Twentieth ward, and Cervantes.

Opposing the motion were Democratic Aldermen John T. Curry, Fifth ward; Thomas J. Finan Jr., Sixteenth ward; Carl Gassel, First ward; Harris; Joseph E. Kavanaugh, Fourteenth ward; DeWitte T. Lawson, Nineteenth ward; Raymond Leisure, Seventh ward; Anthony T. Mascuzzini, Twenty-fourth ward; Joseph Noel, Twenty-seventh ward; Thomas O'Shea, Fifteenth ward, and Joseph P. Roddy, Seventeenth ward.

Lawson and O'Shea said they would change their votes if the bill is not reported out of the committee by March 24, when the board is scheduled to adjourn.

For Code, Against Move.

Seven of the aldermen who voted against discharging the committee announced they were for enactment of the new code. They said they objected to establishing a precedent of discharging a committee from consideration of a bill.

They are Roddy, Gassel, Lawson, Finan, O'Shea, Leisure and Noel.

Harris pledged that his committee will bring the bill out before adjournment, "but I can't do it in 30 minutes." He said amendments still are being prepared for it, and some were submitted as late as last night.

Raising his voice, Harris charged that pressure by special interest groups and newspapers was being exerted for passage of the new code. "But in all my experience," he went on, "the board never has taken a bill from a committee no matter how much heat was put on."

Harris called the bill "the most important to come before this board in the 16 years I have been here."

Smith declared that "I'll have to vote to bring this bill out of the committee because I have to face people, and because people are out of work."

Handling Assailed.

McDonald said the bill has been "the worst handled" of any measure since he became an alderman four years ago. "We knew during the five years the bill was in preparation that it would be an important one, and yet it has been treated with less respect than a minor traffic bill," McDonald said.

He charged that only three "poorly announced" public hearings were conducted on the bill, and "not one specific amendment to the bill" was discussed at any of the hearings. McDonald denied that special interests were pushing the bill, but that the public at large had a high interest in it.

Fire Safety Measure.

Mayor Tucker, in informing the board of his approval of the modified school fire safety measure, said it had received the "unqualified indorsement" of the Missouri Inspection Bureau and the Insurance Board of St. Louis.

Public Safety Director Sestric had told the Mayor that he recommended approval of the substitute with misgivings, in view of certain "shortcomings" in the bill.

The most important change in the new bill relates to automatic sprinklers. Under the previous ordinance if fireproof construction were added to a building rated combustible, sprinklers would have to be installed throughout, including the fireproof part. The new measure would limit the sprinkler requirement to the old combustible part.

Obscenity Bill Passed.

The board passed a bill amending the old obscene literature ordinance, intended to correct provisions found unconstitutional by the Missouri Supreme Court.

The amended measure provides that the manufacturer or seller of the literature must have knowledge of its contents. Also, tie-in deals requiring dealers to buy such literature from wholesalers would be barred.

The board passed over Mayor Tucker's veto a bill re-zoning a tract at Hampton and Devonshire avenues from local business to multiple dwelling. The City Plan Commission had recommended against the re-zoning.

Alderman Sartorius, in appealing for overriding of the veto, said a five-story, 40-family "luxury" apartment was planned for the site and that the project was approved by improvement associations and subdivision trustees.

MEDAL HONORING DR. DOOLEY IS PROPOSED IN SENATE BILL

WASHINGTON, March 10 (AP)—A gold medal honoring the late Dr. Thomas A. Dooley of St. Louis is proposed in a bill prepared for introduction today by Senator Hubert H. Humphrey (Dem.), Minnesota.

Dr. Dooley, who won fame for his medical aid to southeast Asia, died of cancer in New York last Jan. 18. He was 34 years old. He had founded two hospitals in Laos and was one of the organizers of Medico, Inc., an organization which established 17 medical projects in 12 countries. Humphrey asked Congress to recognize Dr. Dooley's "gallant and unselfish public service."

3 FIRMS TO FORM NUCLEAR ENTERPRISE

Mallinckrodt Chemical Works, Olin Mathieson Chemical Corp. and Nuclear Development Corp. of America are planning to form a major new $25,000,000 corporation to be called United Nuclear Corp., it was announced today by Harold E. Thayer, president of Mallinckrodt.

The new company will combine the facilities and personnel of Nuclear Development Corp., the nuclear fuels operations of Olin Mathieson and the commercial operations of Mallinckrodt's Nuclear Division at Hematite and St. Louis.

The merger does not involve the Weldon Spring uranium processing facilities operated by Mallinckrodt for the Atomic Energy Commission.

The St. Louis division of the proposed new corporation will be headed by Charles D. Harrington, Webster Groves, who will be a vice president of the corporation.

William C. Foster, a director and vice president of Olin, which is the majority stockholder, will be president of the new corporation.

Thayer said United Nuclear would be the first integrated nuclear service organization in the United States and would serve both commercial and government customers. He said it would have skills and facilities for research and development, reactor system design, manufacture of nuclear fuel materials, reactor and core fabrication, fuel management, cold scrap processing, isotopes and hot radiation energy resources. It will also have personnel skilled in hot core transportation, hot scrap processing and hot waste disposal.

Harrington will be in charge of nuclear materials operations at Hematite and St. Louis. Edward Hartshorne, nuclear operations vice president of Olin, will be vice president of what was Olin's nuclear fuels operations in New Haven and Montville, Conn. John R. Menke, president of Nuclear Development Corp., will be vice president of what was his company's division at White Plains, N.Y.

United Nuclear will employ up to 1400 persons.

MAN HIT BY POLICEMAN'S AUTO DIES; 2ND FATALITY

Charles A. Walsley, 6437 Nottingham avenue, died today at St. Anthony Hospital of injuries suffered Monday night when he was struck by an automobile driven by an off-duty policeman. His wife, who was crossing Hampton avenue with him, was killed in the accident.

Witnesses reported that Walsley had been thrown about 25 feet after impact. He suffered compound fractures of the right leg and other injuries. The driver, Patrolman Thomas Hennessy, was not arrested.

Police said that Mr. and Mrs. Walsley were crossing the street to a bowling alley when struck. Walsley, who was 52 years old, was head of a management engineering firm bearing his name. His offices were at 611 Olive street.

BULLET IS FIRED INTO NEGRO'S HOME SECOND TIME IN WEEK

A bullet was fired last night through a rear window of a home at 4231 Atholene avenue occupied by William McFarland, a Negro, he reported to police. McFarland, who bought his home last Dec. 2, said the bullet apparently was fired from a rifle. It penetrated the screen and the window glass. He said it was the second shot fired through the same dining room window in one week. Two bricks were thrown through the same window his first night in the house last Dec. 5 and he has received threatening calls and letters, he said.

The McFarland family is the only Negro family in the block. He has been promised "all necessary" police protection. McFarland, manager of a used-car lot, is married and the father of two children, 2 and 5 years old.

OPPOSING VIEWS GIVEN HERE ON U.S. SCHOOL AID

Opposing views on President Kennedy's bill for federal aid to education were expressed here yesterday.

Finis E. Engleman, executive secretary of the American Association of School Administrators, supported the President's contention that Federal aid to non-public schools would be unconstitutional.

Raymond Geerdes, principal of the Christian Reformed Schools of Pella, Ia., asserted, however, that if federal funds are provided for education, then the Government must deal with all parents on an equal basis.

Education is a national problem, Engleman said in supporting the school aid program. There is a present need for 150,000 more school rooms, and the best way to stimulate the nation's economy is to build more schools, he declared.

Engleman told a press conference at the Sheraton-Jefferson Hotel that building homes and roads does not stimulate the economy as much as building of schools. Schools use a wide diversity of equipment, and their teachers have buying power, he said.

Long Support Cited. Engleman said the school administrators' group has long supported plans such as President Kennedy's proposals which include grants to states for classrooms or salaries, or both. The cost, he noted, would be $2,300,000,000 in a three-year period.

On the subject of aid to private and parochial schools, he said: "Let's have open discussion. It is good for the American people to examine this question." Engleman is here for the four-day convention of the school administrators, which starts tomorrow. He is a former school superintendent.

Geerdes said parents of private and parochial school children want full constitutional rights to educate their children, without having the Government place limitations on their right to free exercise of religion as they believe it applies to education.

Addressing about 125 persons at a public forum sponsored by Citizens for Educational Freedom in the auditorium of Galaudet School, he declared: "We must demand our full share of the common tax money for doing our constitutional right in education."

Grants to Parents. Geerdes called for federal grants to parents of children attending private and parochial schools. "We want fine public schools but it has been proved historically that pouring all students into public schools is not a worthy ideal," he declared.

He cited a 1925 Supreme Court decision in an Oregon case which said in part: "The fundamental theory of liberty upon which all government in this union reposes excludes any general power of the state to standardize its children by forcing them to accept instruction from public school teachers only."

The citizens group adopted a resolution to send telegrams to President Kennedy and to Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare Abraham Ribicoff urging that the Government provide grant-in-aid vouchers to parents for their children's education at schools of their choice.

The organization maintains that a program of direct grants to parents would not be in violation of the principle of separation of church and state.

SIX IMPROVEMENT GROUPS BACK NEW BUILDING CODE

Six South Side neighborhood improvement associations have joined in urging adoption of the city's proposed new building code.

Herman L. Stengel, chairman of the Morganford Park Improvement Association, said today the six groups believe that failure to adopt the code would drive industry away from St. Louis.

In addition to the Morganford group, the organizations that signed a telegram to the Board of Aldermen were the Hampton and Gravois, Eugene Fields, Boulevard Heights, Al Claire Meadows and Carondelet improvement associations. All are members of the United South Side Improvement Associations.

PLAN FOR PEACE IN LAOS PUT UP TO RED REBELS

PHNOM PENH, Cambodia, March 10 (AP)—Neutralist former Premier Souvanna Phouma of Laos and the strong man of the Western-backed Laotian government agreed today on a program of conferences and eventual national elections that they hope will end the civil war in their little nation.

Prince Souvanna undertook to urge the program on the pro-Communist rebels and Pathet Lao guerrillas, who control much of the Laotian countryside and up to now have recognized him as the legal head of government.

Four-Point Proposal. Prince Souvanna and Gen. Phoumi Nosavan, deputy premier of Prince Boun Oum's government in Vientiane, announced this peace plan:

1. Speedy organization of a commission of three neutral nations—Burma, Cambodia and Malaysia—proposed by Laotian King Savang Vatthana as a watchdog group against foreign interference in Laos. Cambodia had rejected the king's proposal, saying the pro-Communists would not co-operate, but apparently Souvanna hopes his approval will make a difference.

2. A meeting of the three groups involved in the Laotian civil war—Boun Oum's Vientiane regime, neutralists loyal to Souvanna and the Pathet Lao.

3. An international conference, possibly the 14 nations proposed by the Cambodian chief of state, Prince Norodom Sihanouk. The United States has opposed this idea because Communist China would attend.

4. Neutralization of Laos and general elections for a new government.

Souvanna Stays Abroad. Souvanna refused an invitation to return to Vientiane, saying he could do more to solve the situation by remaining abroad.

Gen. Phoumi was to return to Vientiane today, but another delegation from his government will come here Sunday to meet with Souvanna before he leaves next week for Hong Kong and a tour of foreign capitals. His mission will be to convince Western governments that his policy of neutralism and a coalition of all factions in Laos will not bring the strategic little southeast Asian kingdom under Communist domination.

Souvanna's intention to go ahead with his foreign tour indicated his negotiations with the pro-Communist rebels in the central Laotian plains would be slow in starting, although he may have received indications of their reaction in advance when he visited them in Xieng Khouang recently.

Even though the negotiations proceed at the leisurely pace customary in Laos, fighting will soon be bogged in mud because the monsoon rains are starting. In their communique, Souvanna and Gen. Phoumi said both sides recognized neutrality as a necessary basis for national peace in Laos.

Both condemned foreign intervention, without naming any nations, and said it must be stopped. They stressed this was only possible with the aid of an impartial international commission, accepted by all factions and able to operate in all parts of the nation.

Attack By Pathet Lao. In Laos, pro-Communist Pathet Lao rebels began a three-pronged attack today against government positions at Sala Phou Koun junction, which controls the vital north-south highway.

Government commander Gen. Boun Leuth Sanichan reportedly moved his headquarters south in the face of a heavy attack by at least nine rebel battalions.

There was no indication what effect the attack would have on the government's long-promised drive northward into the rebel-held central plain. Government officers in the past have said control of Sala Phou Koun is a prerequisite for such an offensive.

Rebels attacked Sala Phou Koun and two related government strongpoints—Muong Kassy, 22 miles south, and Sala Phou Keng, eight miles north. These positions control the highway that links Vientiane with the royal capital of Udon Prabang in the North. Sala Phou Koun is 40 miles south of Luang Prabang.

Government troops withdrew from Sala Phou Koun Tuesday under heavy artillery fire but laid down a counterbattery and prevented the rebels from taking control.

AILING ELIZABETH TAYLOR TAKEN OFF DANGER LIST

LONDON, March 10 (UPI)—Actress Elizabeth Taylor was off the danger list today and her doctor said her will to live was the major factor in her "very rare recovery."

Dr. Carl Heinz Goldman said Miss Taylor—twice near death since she became ill with pneumonia last Saturday—was "definitely out of danger" last night.

"She has made a very rare recovery," Dr. Goldman told reporters outside the London Clinic. "Much of it can be attributed to the special drugs, but of course she herself, with her remarkable will to live, was the biggest factor in overcoming the illness."

WILLIAMS LIMITS HIS COMMENTS ON U.S. AND CONGO

LAGOS, Nigeria, March 10 (AP)—

African reporters demanded for an hour yesterday that G. Mennen Williams define precisely the United States position on the Congo government.

Under the questioning, Williams would go no further than to say President Joseph Kasavubu is the only recognized Congo chief of state.

Kasavubu, Williams said, "is proceeding to organize a government. We are hopeful a government of national unity will be formed and we look forward to the time when Kasavubu's government will be recognized by Parliament. We regard this as a government being formed by the constitutionally recognized head of the state. No other government is constitutionally recognized as a government of national unity."

The former Michigan Governor, now United States assistant Secretary of State for African affairs, emphasized that the United States has no national interest in the Congo and is opposed to any unilateral operation. Williams has visited 11 African countries since he left Washington Feb. 15. He plans to visit Togo, Ghana, the Ivory Coast, Liberia and Upper Volta before returning home.

GEORGIA U. DINING HALLS OPENED TO NEGRO STUDENTS

COLUMBUS, Ga., March 10 (AP)—The dining rooms and all other facilities of the University of Georgia have been opened to United States district court order to the two Negroes now attending the institution and any others who may be admitted later.

The order was issued by Judge W. A. Boodle yesterday at the request of Attorney General Eugene Cook.

Charlayne Hunter and Hamilton Holmes, Atlanta Negroes whose court-ordered admission to the Athens institution touched off a riot last January, have refrained from using the student dining halls.

Miss Hunter, however, informed university officials she wished to eat in a student dining hall. Cook's request applied only to the dining facilities, but Donald L. Hollowell, attorney for the two students, asked that it be made all-inclusive, specifying the campus swimming pool. Boodle ruled that the university could not deny Negro students any facilities open to white students.

SENATE INQUIRY SOUGHT IN FREEING OF RB-47 FLYERS

WASHINGTON, March 10 (AP)—

Senator Styles Bridges (Rep., New Hampshire, has asked for a Senate investigation of the circumstances of the release of two American flyers by Russia.

Bridges yesterday requested that Air Force Capt. John McKone and Freeman Olmstead, who were the only known survivors of an RB-47 reconnaissance flight shot down by the Russians, be called for testimony.

He asked also for testimony from "the State Department officials who negotiated with the Soviet Union for their release."

The Senate, Bridges said, "should know the details of any agreements which resulted from negotiations which led to their release, because any such agreements are likely to have a significant bearing on United States-Soviet relations."

McKone and Olmstead were released by the Russians Jan. 25 after seven months in a Moscow prison.

Bridges made his request for an investigation in a letter to Senator Richard B. Russell (Dem., Georgia, chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee. Bridges is the senior Republican member of the committee.

RIZZO DENIES PART IN CHECK FRAUD SCHEME

August T. Rizzo, proprietor of the Fireplace Restaurant, denied today on the witness stand that he ever participated with Charles A. Betscher in a fraudulent insurance company loan scheme.

The testimony was given after the Government rested its case against Rizzo before a jury in the court of United States District Judge Roy W. Harper. Rizzo and Betscher, a former insurance agent, were charged with defrauding the Franklin Life Insurance Co. and Joseph L. Postar of Granite City, a policyholder.

Rizzo acknowledged that he had cashed two insurance company checks for Betscher last spring. One was for $1850 and the other was for $1580. The checks, which have been introduced as evidence in the case, represented loans made by the Franklin company on Postar's policies.

"Betscher came to the restaurant last March," Rizzo said, "and asked me to cash the $1850 check. There was another man with him and he introduced the man to me as Mr. Postar."

Postar was in the courtroom. Rizzo said he was not the man with Betscher.

Government Witness. Betscher, who pleaded guilty last Monday, appeared as a Government witness at the trial and implicated Rizzo in the scheme.

Later in March, Rizzo testified, he cashed the $1580 Postar check for Betscher. Betscher tried to get him to cash five other checks, he said, and he refused.

Rizzo testified that Betscher was a frequent visitor at his restaurant and cocktail lounge at 3427 South Kingshighway. The restaurant corporation of which Rizzo is a major stockholder, lent Betscher sums of $200 and $500, Rizzo said.

Rizzo explained why he kept $600 out of the proceeds of the $1850 check by telling the jury that he kept the amount on Betscher's instructions. The money was for repayment of the $300 loan, plus interest, he said.

Met in July 1958. Rizzo testified he met Betscher in July 1958. Betscher attempted to finance purchase of an automobile at an agency where Rizzo was employed, the witness said.

Rizzo said he tried to make the deal at that time but it fell through.

Later, Betscher began coming to the Fireplace Restaurant, Rizzo testified, and these visits led to the loans. Betscher was unable to borrow money from loan companies, Rizzo said, because of a poor credit rating.

The Government closed its case after Phil King, a special Federal Bureau of Investigation agent, testified Rizzo had admitted cashing the two checks.

Charles Moore, who said he formerly was in business with Rizzo, testified earlier that he went along on two trips to banks and saw Rizzo cash Franklin Co. checks.

Moore, who later worked for Rizzo at the Fireplace, said last April he saw Rizzo sign the name of a vice president of the Mercantile Trust Co. on the back of a Franklin Co. check.

Drove Rizzo to Bank. The incident occurred when Moore was driving Rizzo to the bank, Moore said. He said the check was for about $2300. Moore said Rizzo later told him Miss Ruby Nafie, a former teller at the bank, cashed the check. Later the same day, he saw Betscher at the Fireplace, he stated.

The bank vice president, Herman O. Orlick, testified earlier that it was his duty to approve any large checks cashed by non-customers of the bank. He was shown a check from the Franklin company for $2331 with his name signed on the back.

The signature was not his, he testified. He said his usual procedure was to initial the check and accompany the person to the bank's payroll window. Bank records, however, showed this check was cashed by Miss Nafie, who did not work at the payroll window, he said.

Moore, who is now unemployed, further testified that in May he accompanied Rizzo to the Manchester Bank, where Rizzo cashed a check for about $1400. The witness was shown a Franklin Co. check for $1800, and said he believed that was the same check.

Betscher, on the witness stand earlier, said he forged indorsements on five checks representing loans to Postar, and split the $8458 proceeds with Rizzo and a bank teller.

He said he had taken the checks to Rizzo and had given the restaurant owner a sample of Postar's signature. He added that he did not see Rizzo sign any of these checks.

Under cross examination by Rizzo's attorney, Charles Shaw, Betscher denied that he had large gambling debts in Las Vegas. He said a $500 loan he had received from Rizzo was to make some repairs on his automobile and was not to pay off Las Vegas gamblers.

DE SOTO TO SEE DE SOTO FETE BRADENTON, Fla., March 10 (AP)—This year's re-enactment of the landing of Hernando de Soto on the coast of Florida will have as a guest a direct descendant of the famed explorer.

Rafael de Soto of Spain is to attend the event March 20 along with Mariano de Yturralde y Orbeago, Spanish ambassador to the United States.

the terms for the return of U.N. troops to the key ports of Banana and Matadi.

The U.N. spokesman told reporters he could not comment on Congolese reports that agreement has been reached by which the United Nations and the Congolese would exercise joint control of air traffic here. This was one major Congolese condition for permitting U.N. forces to return to the ports.

Maj. Gen. Sean McKeown, Irish commander of U.N. forces, was reported to have agreed to a form of joint control over U.N. air traffic in the Congo.

The Congolese informants did not say whether the Congolese were modifying other conditions they said must be met before they would allow U.N. troops to return to Matadi.

U.N. Secretary General Dag Hammarskjöld meanwhile sent a sharp message to Congo President Joseph Kasavubu in effect rejecting any Congolese control of the U.N. force's activity.

IT'S TIME TO GET DOWN TO BRASS TACKS ABOUT COMPACTS

1961 Rambler Classic Six

There's only one all-purpose compact—and this is it! RAMBLER CLASSIC

Better than the Big Cars; Best of the Compacts:

By "all-purpose compact," we mean a full-powered car with full headroom and shoulder room for six big 6-footers, plus the handling ease and economy of smaller cars.

The smaller economy cars that have been rushed to market are called "compacts." (We build an economy compact, too—the Rambler American. We think it's the best car in its class.) But competitive economy compacts simply don't come close to Rambler Classic in room, performance, quality, dependability, durability, maneuverability, or value, as the chart below shows clearly.

Rambler dealers sell more compact cars per dealer than any other dealer group. That's because they can give you more—a better car—plus a top trade-in that often delivers a roomy Rambler Classic for the same cost as a smaller economy compact. See your Rambler Dealer!

Kennedy Helps Truman Observe Anniversary at Capital Dinner

WASHINGTON, March 10 (AP) — Former President Harry S. Truman observed an anniversary last night with the help of President Kennedy.

It was the twentieth anniversary of the creation of the Senate War Investigating Committee which served as Truman's springboard to national prominence.

The dinner party was arranged by Charles Patrick Clark, who was counsel for that committee. Many of Washington's most prominent faces, old and new, Republican and Democrat, beamed at the former President around the banquet table.

Visibly moved by many tributes, Truman, who is 76 years old, told them: "I'm going to do what I can (for the country), but I haven't much left."

Attorney General Robert F. Kennedy, the President's brother, arrived early to get Truman's autograph on a picture made at the Truman Library at Independence, Mo.

Just before the guests, who included Vice President Lyndon B. Johnson, Chief Justice Earl Warren and Speaker Sam Rayburn, sat down for dinner, President Kennedy arrived.

The President, his blue striped shirt hardly in keeping with the black-tie affair, did a lot of handshaking and hurried off to an adjoining room to greet a dinner for Democratic party fund raisers.

Mr. Kennedy told that group he would attend a May 27 fund raising ball to be given in honor of his forty-fourth birthday. He said he did not mind, that his birthday is really May 29.

"Of course," the President said, "this is just an excuse on my part to have a dinner to raise some money. I am told we owe National Chairman John M. Bailey estimated the party deficit at $2,800,000.

To demonstrate his affection for Truman, Mr. Kennedy told the party dinner he hopes to attend a ceremony at Independence April 15 dedicating a Thomas H. Benton mural in the Truman Library. The mural depicts the starting of westward trail blazing from Independence.

Truman, in return, promised to come to Washington to speak at the May 27 party fund-raising dinner.

Vice President Johnson said that there "never was a time, rain or shine, warm or cold, dark or daylight" that Truman ever ignored a plea from a friend.

There was praise, too, from Henry A. Wallace, Truman's

Anybody can join. Buy a new Dodge, either size, and you're in. If you're a compact man, Lancer is for you. That's the car on top, the one we've stuck all the keys on. It costs about the same as a Comet, Falcon or Corvair. If you want a standard size car, you can't beat a Dodge Dart. That's the one on the bottom. It's a full-size Dodge priced model for model with Ford and Chevy. The differences in these two Dodge cars are size, appearance and price. Otherwise they are virtually identical. That's where the keys come in. They point out the good things all Dodge cars share. 1. Unitized bodies. Rust-proofed to protect your investment. Make them worth more at trade-in time. 2. Three-speed pushbutton automatic transmission. Optional at extra cost on all Dodge cars. Obviously, three speeds are better than two, though our competition won't admit it. 3. Engines. Choice of a Six and five V8s in Dart, two inclined sixes in Lancer. 4. Every Dodge

The suspension system on all Dodge cars is named Torsion-Aire. Torsion bars up front, off-center leaf springs in the rear. Here's what Torsion-Aire Ride does for you. Eliminates front end dive when you stop. Keeps the car virtually level on corners. Soaks up bumps. Key-number six covers several points: Oriflow shock absorbers for a controlled ride. He'll save you money by offering you the lowest price and the best deal possible. His motive is simple. He'd like to sell you a new Dodge, full-size Dart or compact Lancer. SUSPENDED SOLDAN TEACHER RESIGNS

George H. Outlaw, suspended mathematics teacher at Soldan High School, submitted his resignation to the St. Louis Board of Education yesterday at a special meeting of the board.

Outlaw was suspended last April after an investigation of reports that he had taken photographs of nude girl students. He was subsequently acquitted by juries on two counts of child molestation, and a third charge was dismissed.

Outlaw's attorney, James J. Rankin, told the school board that although Outlaw "felt vindicated" of the charges by his acquittal, he had decided for personal reasons to resign from his teaching position.

The school board approved a total of 42 days' back pay for Outlaw. Board Attorney Leo M. Lyng said the pay, amounting to $1302, represented the time elapsed between Jan. 11, when Outlaw's case originally was scheduled for hearing by the school board, and yesterday, when the board actually considered it.

Payment for this period was recommended by Superintendent of Instruction Philip J. Hickey, Lyng said. Outlaw will receive no pay for the time between his suspension in April and last Jan. 10, Lyng noted.

On another matter, Board Member Oscar A. Ehrhardt announced yesterday he will write Mayor Raymond R. Tucker asking for a firm bid from the city on a tract of vacant land adjacent to the Dunnica School at Gustine and Keokuk avenues.

A meeting with city officials last week did not result in any statement by the city of its intentions, he said.

Residents of the neighborhood have urged the city to purchase the property for a playground. The school board plans to sell the property and use the money for construction of transportable school buildings elsewhere in the city.

Noting that a private firm offered $66,000 for the lot at a public auction last month, Ehrhardt said members of the school board were not in agreement on whether to sell the lot to the highest bidder or to offer it to the city at a price above its appraised value of $44,500.

Ehrhardt said he would not be willing to approve sale of the land to the city for less than $55,000. This figure, he said, represents splitting the difference between the highest auction bid received by the board and the appraised value.

INDONESIA BREAKS OFF ITS INDIRECT TIES WITH HOLLAND

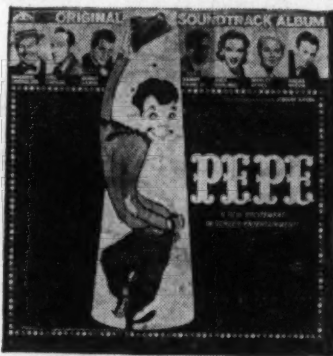

JAKARTA, March 10 (AP)—Indonesia today broke off the indirect diplomatic relations it had kept with its former rulers, The Netherlands.

A Foreign Ministry spokesman announced Britain had been asked to stop representing The Netherlands in Jakarta, and the United Arab Republic had been asked to stop representing Indonesia in The Hague.

The complete break followed Indonesian complaints of an increasing Dutch military buildup in Dutch-occupied Western New Guinea, which Indonesia claims. Indonesia broke direct diplomatic relations with The Netherlands last August over the New Guinea issue.

BROWN SHOE CO. CASE

TESTIMONY RESUMED

Testimony resumed today before a Federal Trade Commission examiner hearing a complaint against Brown Shoe Co., alleging restraint of trade and price fixing.

The shoe company presented evidence to refute FTC allegations. The two-day hearing began yesterday before Examiner Edward Creel. The Government presented its case in hearings last year.

The Government alleged that Brown Shoe Co. was acting in restraint of trade when it entered into franchise agreements with 650 shoe store operators in 47 states under which the stores were prohibited from selling shoes manufactured by its competitors.

Brown also attempted to require its franchisees to charge prices which it set, the complaint alleged.

Witnesses for the shoe firm were franchise store operators, company "field men" and executives.

One of the witnesses, Alvin Musgrove, operator of shoe stores in Olney and Mount Vernon, Ill., testified that he carried competing brands in his two franchise stores and charged prices above and below those suggested by the manufacturer. The complaint against Brown was filed in October, 1959.

REPORT IS LACKING

ON MINE DISASTER

TERRE HAUTE, Ind., March 10 (AP)—Federal and state mine safety experts adjourned a closed hearing today, indicating they still do not know what caused the Viking coal mine explosion a week ago.

Speaking for the investigators, Rex Lauck, a United Mine Workers officer, said there was no conclusion.

He said about 10 witnesses testified on the explosion that took the lives of 22 miners.

The witnesses included Viking employees and miners who were working other sections of the mine at the time of the blast.

Their testimony was not made public.

Lauck said separate reports would be completed in about 30 days by the Federal Bureau of Mines and the Indiana Bureau of Mines and Mining.

Charles Purcell, state director of mining, said he had not decided whether normal operations would resume at Viking Monday.

Federal investigators returned to Washington after the hearing, but safety teams planned to return to the shaft in another attempt to find the source of the methane gas given as cause for the explosion. The investigators began checking the blast area last Saturday, but said they could not find the source.

In addition to Purcell, present at the hearing were Charles Ferguson, national safety director of the UMW; F. J. Smith, district supervisor of the federal Bureau of Mines, and Birch Brooks, vice president and general manager of Viking Mine Corp.

Uruguay's President Thinks U.S. Emphasis on Military Defense Of Latin America Is an Error

Eduardo Haedo Believes Money Should Be Spent on Direct Aid to People and in Promoting Exchange Programs.

This is another of a series of articles by a Post-Dispatch team investigating Communist infiltration in South America.

By TOM YARBROUGH

A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

MONTEVIDEO, March 10

IN THE JUDGMENT of Uruguay's President Eduardo Victor Haedo, the United States should put less emphasis on the military defense of Latin America and more emphasis on direct aid to the people in "things that really matter."

In these he included food, clothing, homes, schools, hospitals, highways, bridges, and airports. Finally he added an intangible as perhaps the most important item on the list "knowing one another."

President Haedo who has been in office only since March 1 expressed his views in an interview with this reporter and Richard Dudman of the Post-Dispatch.

He had become President not through election but because it was his turn to be the nominal chief of state in a governmental system somewhat like that of Switzerland and unique in the Western Hemisphere. Uruguay is governed by a nine-man Executive Council made up of six majority party members and three minority party members all elected for a four-year term, and the presidency rotates every year.

All executive power remains in the full council and the President has no real power of his own. But Haedo happens to be a flamboyant sort of politician and is feeling his oats.

He is a combination of serious statesman and good-humored buffoon. The interview had just begun and one of the early questions was started thus:

"Uruguay has a world-wide reputation for its advanced social legislation. . . ."

Haedo grabbed the sentence and blurted out "but the only major country that did not send a telegram of congratulation to me March 1 was the United States. President Kennedy was the only one who did not send a telegram."

THIS WAS LIKE a thunderbolt until it became clear that Haedo was not really upset. He was asked if he felt offended.

"Not at all, he said. 'We Latin-Americans are all good-natured.'"

"Then what is the state of Uruguay's relations with the United States even though you did not receive a telegram from Washington on taking office?"

"Excellent!" he said with fervor and then laughed.

At the United States Embassy shortly thereafter it was learned that no greater significance was attached to the March 1 occasion because it did not represent a change of government.

Nevertheless Montevideo newspapers are still printing the texts of messages received from other heads of state.

"Eccentricities are all a part of Haedo's political showmanship. At his country home, for example, he wears a white beret. He has been known to receive official callers and carry on conversation with them as he was being towed around a pool in a boat—towed by manpower—while he lolled back relaxed."

"At the United Nations last September he caused a stir when former Secretary of State Christian Herter had called representatives of the hemispheric nations together for a meeting. Herter had begun to speak and Haedo interrupted saying, 'Epa epa, epa! we Gauchos do not speak English.' (Epa is an exclamation that translates into something like caramba.)"

Herter paused and the interpreter explained in Spanish that he was waiting for the end of the first sentence before giving his interpretation for the benefit of everyone present. That was all, but Haedo of Uruguay had had his flourish.

HE OPENED the present interview by turning away from a desk piled high with work and opening fire with one brief command: "Ask."

Then he asked the first question himself. "Castro question?" he asked. "The problem of Cuba must be solved within the atmosphere of our own household as suggested by Argentina."

Argentina offered last Saturday to try to mediate differences between the United States and Cuba.

"When juridical councils are exhausted," Haedo said, "then we have to make an approach on a brother-to-brother basis."

He was asked what he thought of the great flow of Communist propaganda through here since this is said to be one of the major distribution points for printed matter that is fanned out to all South American countries.

"I do not consider it a problem," he said. "We have the greatest liberty in the world. We are a country of authentic freedom. The fault is with the countries that are receiving this propaganda. Uruguay is not a censor. We are very proud and we respect others so that we will be respected."

(From another source it was ascertained that Uruguay in fact is taking steps to halt this flow of Communist material and that Haedo does not speak for the Executive Council in this regard. This informant said it is recognized on high authority here that the country "has a viper in its bosom.")

"ALL OF OUR PEOPLE feel that we belong to the Western camp," Haedo said, "but we do not belong unconditionally to anyone. The smaller we are the more nationalistic we are. The United States does not have a more sincere friend."

"But you North Americans are slow and dull, sluggish in your thoughts, not quick like us Latins. You take a long time to make a decision and then you are slow to change."

"Twenty years ago the United States decided on a policy of hemispheric defense with ships and guns. You made these arrangements with governments but forgot the people."

"Now, with the arrival of Fidel Castro, the United States is aware of the fact that we governments are of little significance, and that what really matters is the people."

"A man of the middle class must work three years to earn just transportation to the United States. Give us fewer guns and subsidize aviation and shipping with special reduced rates for farmers, teachers, professors, poets, and newspaper men—for exchanges of persons between the United States and Uruguay."

Struggle Over Education Bill Turns on Difficult Legal Point

By ANTHONY LEWIS

WASHINGTON, MARCH 10

MORE AND MORE the political struggle over President Kennedy's aid to education bill is turning on a subtle and difficult legal question: Does the Constitution allow the Government to aid church schools?

From the start the President has said he opposed including parochial schools in his program because to do so would be unconstitutional. He told his press conference last week that "the Constitution clearly prohibits" such aid.

In fact, however, the Constitution is not so clear. Legal scholars dispute what is meant by the First Amendment's command that "Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof." And the Supreme Court has by no means settled the question.

The President recognized the difficulties Thursday. Instead of standing on a flat declaration, he explored the different aspects of the constitutional problem as they applied to his various education proposals.

THE KENNEDY program has three major features: Grants to states for public elementary and secondary school construction or teachers' salaries, scholarships for students at public and private colleges and loans to those colleges for construction.

The hierarchy of the Roman Catholic Church asked how it can be constitutional to aid private, including religious, colleges by scholarships and loans, but not constitutional to do the same for church schools.

Last week the President dealt only with the scholarships. He said they were constitutional, even if used at a denominational institution, because they were "aid to the student," not to the college and "therefore not to a particular religious group."

To support this legal view, Mr. Kennedy cited the Supreme Court's landmark 1947 decision in Everson v. Board of Education. The question there was the constitutionality of a New Jersey law providing busses for parochial as well as public schools.

JUSTICE Hugo L. Black, for a 5-4 majority, upheld the New Jersey law on the theory described by President Kennedy. He said it was a measure for the safety and convenience of children, not a law aiding churches or church schools.

But the line that Justice Black drew has been much criticized as an artificial and unrealistic one. The critics note that many things can be characterized as "aid to the student"—textbooks, for ex-

Most Consumers Would Put Extra Money in Circulation.

PRINCETON.

ADMINISTRATION economists will be interested in a survey which shows what consumers would do with extra money which a possible tax reduction might bring them.

The Gallup Poll assigned its field staff to ask this question of consumers across the country:

"Suppose you were given an extra month's salary which you could spend in any way you wanted—how would you spend it?"

Indications are that most Americans would immediately put such extra money back into circulation.

Only a relative few (14 per cent) say they would hold on to the money by saving it or investing it.

Here is a compilation of the replies:

- Pay off debts — — — 24%
- Make home improvements, buy home equipment — — 18
- Save it, invest it — — — 14
- Buy food, clothing, other family needs — — 13
- Take vacation, entertainment, have good time — 13
- Give it to charity, to church, to needy — — — 9
- Buy something I need — — 7
- Pay medical bills — — — 4
- Use for children's education 3
- Other uses — — — — — 2
- Don't know — — — — — 2

(Table adds to more than 100 per cent since some persons mentioned more than one use to which they would put the money.)

Meriwether Politician Who Has Wielded Power Without Office

New Director of Export-Import Bank Known as Assistant Governor of Alabama.

WASHINGTON, MARCH 10

CHARLES MINOR MERIWETHER, approved by the Senate Wednesday after much controversy to be a director of the Export-Import Bank, has been for years a member of that school of Southern politicians wielding more influence out of public office than in.

He is the traditional behind-the-scenes organizer who manages to come up with the votes.

President Kennedy's nomination of him to the federal post put him openly on the national scene for the first time. "They really got that spotlight on me today," he noted last week after the Senate committee hearing on his nomination.

But home in Alabama, it does not take a spotlight to call attention to the existence of the 49-year-old, 210-pound six-footer who has been serving as Alabama's director of finance for the last two years. They know he is around, they know his influence and they often call him the "assistant Governor."

"Who is going to be Governor now that Charlie is going to Washington?" one friend quipped. Still another, illustrating Meriwether's importance in the state, tells the story of the day the Governor was stopped by a highway patrolman for speeding. "I'm John Patterson," the Governor said. "I don't care if you're Charlie Meriwether," the policeman replied.

MERIWETHER first became fascinated by politics after he went to work in the Memphis insurance company owned by one of the nation's last old-time political bosses, E. H. Crump. From 1933 to 1942, Meriwether worked for Crump, and as he told the Senate committee, "I usually supported the same candidates Mr. Crump did."

Meriwether was born in Memphis. He attended the University of Tennessee, studying in the College of Arts and Sciences. In

The Shelter We Have

In view of the well organized publicity for the movie, "The Hoodlum Priest," and the shelter for ex-prisoners operated by Father Dismas Clark in St. Louis, attention should be called to the long time efforts and many accomplishments of voluntary prisoners aid agencies in this field, and to previous experience with shelters for ex-prisoners.

The prisoners' aid movement in this country is 175 years old, and older than that in Europe. These and other welfare agencies have experimented frequently with the idea of shelters or "half-way houses" for prisoners. Forty years ago one national agency had a score or more in operation.

With a few notable exceptions, they have been abandoned because (1) experience proved the difficulty of proper screening; (2) parole laws in most states forbid parolees to associate; (3) sooner or later crimes were plotted at such shelters or by residents; and, (4) with justification or otherwise, police harassed residents in search for likely suspects for unsolved crimes.

A few such shelters do operate successfully. In these the number of prisoners accommodated is very small and the hostel is well staffed with trained personnel able to do intensive casework, and leadership and direction is of the highest caliber.

The prisoners' aid agencies work unostentatiously in and out of prisons and jails, seeking the maximum protection of the community as well as the welfare of the clients. Housing for clients is obtained wherever it seems best for each individual. The more than 25 long-established prisoners' aid agencies in Canada and the United States which are members of our association are practically all supported in large part by local United Funds or Community Funds, and are members of Community Welfare councils.

In your own city, there is the St. Louis Bureau for Men under the capable direction of Isaac Gurman. Mr. Gurman was president of the International Prisoners Aid Association in 1951-52 and is director of surveys and new developments for our association.

To our knowledge, the St. Louis Bureau for Men has extended help to thousands of former prisoners in finding employment or housing, and through counseling and meeting material needs. According to our records, it introduced psychiatric services to the Missouri probation and parole department and has made many studies of correctional matters for both the state and the city of St. Louis.

The bureau introduced the beginnings of staff training at the Missouri penitentiary and reformatory. Mr. Gurman served as consultant to the state department of corrections and, we believe, occupies a similar position with the city of St. Louis. Both Mr. Gurman and the bureau are widely known and respected in the correctional field. St. Louis has every right to be proud of the local services they have rendered, with United Fund support.

Here's Why

I should like to contribute my "analysis" of why Mayor Tucker barely managed to scrape through with the nomination.

Politicians who never did like him, did not vote for him. People with an ax to grind, did not vote for him. And most important of all, people who do like him, did not vote for him. It is the same old story—voter apathy.

So sure is the voter that everything will come out right, that he feels it isn't necessary to vote. Some other guy will go to the polls and do the job for him.

Mayor Tucker has worked hard for our city and he deserves more from the citizens than a casual feeling that if it doesn't rain, or if everything is just right, then maybe, just maybe, Mr. Citizen will take the trouble to support him.

Free Riders

Congratulations on your fine editorial pointing out that the motor carriers are not bearing their share of the burden of maintaining and expanding our highway system.

In my opinion it is very urgent that the results of the recent tests at Ottawa, Ill., be applied in determining the share of highway costs to be borne by the truckers.

Congo Guessing Game

Frustrated United Nations officials in the Congo must feel that they are playing a multiple shell game, trying to guess who stands where and who wants what. The meeting of native leaders at Tananarive promised some agreement on authority and policy, but that hope is fading in bickering. In any case, Antoine Gizenga, the leader of the Lumumba faction, is boycotting the meeting.

Even worse, the crisis induced by the Congolese seizure of the port of Matadi from the U.N. has not yet been allayed. President Kasavubu not only seems reluctant to return the port, but is demanding that the international force give up control of important air fields. That, of course, is out of the question since it would make it impossible for U.N. troops to carry out their mandate. The U.N. has already suffered a severe blow to its prestige in being forced out of Matadi. To regain lost ground it must overcome the effects of this setback and try to avoid similar occurrences in the future.

Another attempt by the Congolese to seize control—as at Matadi—could touch off a new alarm such as the one which caused Ambassador Timberlake to call for American naval support. Had not the White House ordered the turnabout of our warships, this country might have blundered into unilateral intervention. Happily, President Kennedy kept the fat out of the fire.

The President also made a positive contribution through his diplomatic discussion with President Nkrumah of Ghana. While Nkrumah's address to the U.N. Assembly was confused by reservations about Secretary General Hammarskjöld and the charge that the U.N. is supporting the "mutinous" Congolese army "against the democratically elected government of the Congo," his proposals point to a way out of the dilemma.

He urges a strengthening of the U.N. force, primarily but not exclusively under African and Asian leadership. He wants foreigners—especially Belgians—out of the Congo for the time being. He wants the Congolese army disarmed and then retrained under the U.N. He also wants the Congolese parliament reconvened and, after that, general elections under U.N. supervision. And he believes the U.N. should use force if necessary.

The disarming of the warring factions certainly would be the first big step toward peace, and a strengthened police force also could guarantee orderly elections. It is another question whether the native leaders would abide by the results. With good will on their part, the U.N. certainly could provide the technical assistance necessary to a workable government.

Much also would depend on the disinterestedness of Nkrumah and other African and Asian leaders. Their influence in the Congo is great, and President Kennedy is statesmanlike in supporting them as far as possible. With the patient backing of the other powers in the U.N.—or at least a substantial majority—they could make it possible for the Congolese to decide who's who and what's what.

A Billboard Lobby Victory

The death of the billboard bill in the Missouri House Roads Committee offers a disgraceful example of power politics. The lesson is that the general public has no lobby. The public interest will lose every time if it is leaderless against vigorous special interests.

Few Missourians, we suspect, would oppose the billboard bill if they understood its purpose. The bill proposed to regulate, not ban absolutely, commercial advertising signs along limited-access highways. It was meant to protect scenery and safety of motorists who are paying for those highways. By complying with federal regulatory standards, Missouri could gain a federal interstate highway bonus which the bill's sponsor, Representative Tom Baker of Stoddard county, estimated at a million dollars.

Who would oppose a measure that offered Missouri a double gift of money and roadside protection? Well, the billboard industry opposed it. Motel and restaurant operators opposed it. Against their dedicated commercial opposition, what chance did Missouri's scenery or its largely unspoken public opinion have? The answer was the overwhelming committee vote to kill the bill.

We hope the bill is revived. If it is not revived in this session, Missouri will lose the federal bonus offer which expires next July. But the measure will not be revived unless public opinion makes itself known, and it will not be passed unless the Governor and the Highway Commission fight for it. Responsible public officials are the only real lobby that the public has. They should provide the leadership to keep new roads out of billboard forests.

For the Cities of America

For a nation which is becoming ever more urban, the renewal of its cities must have a priority almost as high as that of national defense. President Kennedy's housing and redevelopment program is an acknowledgment of this and, on the whole, a modest one. It should appeal to a Congress which has been reminded of our changing pattern of life by the President's further suggestion for the establishment of a Department of Housing and Urban Affairs at Cabinet level.

There is no great purpose in trying to fix a price tag on the proposals. Much of the money involved would go into construction loans repayable to the Treasury. Yet these loans, granted at lower rates and for longer terms than those now generally available, would provide many an American family with decent shelter; and they would, of course, provide a significant stimulant for the building industry and the economy in general. The question is whether housing costs might not be further eased by making money for some projects even cheaper—as has been done, for example, in New York.

The program is a balanced one, providing more money for the various current types of aid to construction while also giving more consideration to middle income families, those not eligible for subsidized housing yet not in reach of the rentals necessary for the soundness of other projects.

If only to eliminate time-consuming red tape, it would be well to bring these activities under the control of a new agency keenly alive to their importance. Urban renewal, however, involves more than building new homes and apartments. It demands a more effective approach to the snarl of our balkanized metropolitan areas. It demands sound planning for traffic and transit, for the many activities which must be properly co-ordinated in our super-cities.

While the Government, properly enough, has been concerned for the conservation of wildlife and wilderness areas and has spent literally billions in support of agriculture, there has been, by and large, an assumption that cities take care of themselves. To an extent, they do. But their very growth has brought manifold problems which deserve top-level attention in Washington.

Pass the Building Code

The Democratic aldermanic leadership has no time to spare if it is going to pry the proposed new building code out of committee before the current session ends in two weeks. This is "must" legislation, involving considerations that affect the economic future of the city. If the Democratic leadership is unwilling or unable to force a vote on the code the whole city will suffer.

At the moment the measure is resting in Alderman Alfred I. Harris's committee on public safety in deference to objections of the Bricklayers' union, for which Mr. Harris is spokesman. Mr. Harris's political boss, Matt O'Neill, Twenty-second Ward committeeman, is an official of the Bricklayers.

The present code is a specification code. It spells out precisely what materials must be used on various types of construction. And as a practical matter the answer almost invariably comes out: "brick." The Bricklayers make much of the fact that this material has a four-hour fire-resistant quality, which no body denies. But it is interesting to note that brick walls usually have windows, and that glass has a fire-resistant quality of about five minutes. So the remaining three hours and 55 minutes of protection afforded by the surrounding brick really isn't much of a protection after all.

Under the proposed code, fire walls between buildings in the downtown area no doubt would continue to be of masonry, because the code calls for four hours of fire resistance. But depending upon height, location and type of occupancy, walls facing the street would be permitted a lesser fire-resistant rating. There, a four-hour rating of brick would be neither necessary nor practically possible.

Brick is a strong, handsome material and many builders may prefer it to anything else. But why should they be prohibited from using a substitute that would afford the same protection, especially if the substitute might permit economies not possible with masonry construction? In effect the proposed code would permit that kind of substitution. It is based on the "performance" principle.

Most of St. Louis's metropolitan competitors, as well as St. Louis county and many of its municipalities, operate under the performance principle of the proposed new code. If St. Louis is to compete for new construction and new jobs and new commerce and industry it will have to adopt a similar reasonable outlook. But if the Democratic leadership permits Alderman Harris and his brick-laying friends to wag the dog, the city and the building trades groups in general are going to suffer.

Ambassador, Not Secretary Rusk

There is a little more than may meet the average eye in Secretary of State Rusk's announcement that he will "demote" himself when he goes to the SEATO meeting at Bangkok, and later to the NATO meeting at Oslo. To the average eye it may make no difference at all that he will attend these away-from-Washington sessions in the role of ambassador—and that, as such, he will report to Acting Secretary of State Bowles—since all concerned will be well aware that Mr. Rusk, whatever protocol he may follow, really is head of the State Department.

Yet there is something more than a formality involved. The change of roles will mean—as it did when Secretary of State Marshall followed the same procedure—that a responsible individual actually is "in charge of the shop" in Washington.

More importantly, it is a re-affirmation of Secretary Rusk's sound conviction that the head of the State Department should be in Washington rather than gadding about doing ambassadors' work. Apparently strong pressures induced him to depart from this pattern in the case of SEATO and of NATO. Yet his pointed self-reduction in rank indicates his aversion to carrying the State Department about "in his hat" as Secretary Dulles so often did. And it suggests that whenever possible, he will resist acceptance of the dubious role of a traveling secretary.

Missouri Moves to Ratify

The Missouri House acted commendably in voting to ratify a Constitutional amendment giving citizens of the District of Columbia the right to vote for President. The measure now goes to the Senate, where prompt action should be taken. More than half of the 38 states needed have approved the amendment. Missouri should join the procession.

Tourists Should Do Their Part

Which was it, irresolution or inadequate preparation, that caused the Kennedy Administration to hold up action on its proposal for a reduction in the duty-free allowance for tourists? The House Ways and Means Committee had reached tentative agreement on the measure and was ready to approve it formally when word came that the State Department wanted a delay in order to study protests from Canada and Mexico.

If the cut in the allowance will make enough difference in tourist expenditures to pose an important problem for such countries, the Administration should have been aware of it before making the proposal. We doubt if any serious crisis is likely, for the tourists who go on large-scale shopping sprees are few, and probably are not likely to be deterred by a change in the duty allowance. If this is so, however, then the Administration cuts a poor figure of not knowing its own mind by postponing action.

From the standpoint of the American tourist, paying duty on more than $100 worth of goods he lugs home is a small enough contribution to the correction of his country's balance-of-payments problem. Certainly the tourist ought to contribute something, along with servicemen who are being forbidden to bring home duty-free automobiles. Travel is a fine thing, and it would be imprudent to discourage it, but there is no reason why it has to include excessive duty-free spending, and we cannot believe that many countries depend upon it.

The Black Man's Irony Burden

Distinguished Author Observes That Whites Really Expect Negroes to Be Superior

John Steinbeck in
The Saturday Review

I am constantly amazed at the qualities we expect in Negroes. No race has ever offered another such high regard. We expect Negroes to be wiser than we are, more tolerant than we are, braver, more dignified than we, more self-controlled and self-disciplined. We even demand more talent from them than from ourselves.

A Negro must be 10 times as gifted as a white to receive equal recognition. We expect Negroes to have more endurance than we in athletics, more courage in defeat, more rhythm and versatility in music and dancing, more controlled emotion in theater.

We expect them to obey rules of conduct we flout, to be more courteous, more gallant, more proud, more steadfast.

In a word, while maintaining that Negroes are inferior to us, by our unquestioning faith in them we prove our conviction that they are superior in many fields. Let me give a few examples.

In the Alabama bus boycott we knew there would be no Negro violence—and there wasn't. The only violence was white violence.

In the streets we expect courtesy from Negroes even when we are ugly and overbearing.

—Herblock in The Washington Post.
"Nah, You Ain't Got Enough Edjicashun to Vote."

will be game and will not complain at a decision.

In Little Rock we knew that any brutality would originate among the whites.

If there is racial trouble, we are convinced that Negroes will not strike the first blow, will not attack in the night, will not set off bombs, and our belief is borne out by events.

We expect Negroes to be good-tempered and self-controlled under all circumstances.

But our greatest expectation is that they will be honest, honorable and decent. In New York, with its daily reports of public thefts, deceptions and assorted political and fiscal raids on public money and treason against public trust, one Negro who succumbs to the temptation to do what many white people do fills us with dismay and the papers are full of it. What greater compliment can we pay to a people?

Finally, let me bring it down to cases. I have children, as many of you whites who read this have. Do you think your children would have the guts, the dignity and the responsibility to go to school in Little Rock knowing they would be insulted, shoved, hated, sneered at, even spat upon day after day, and do it quietly without showing anger, petulance, or complaint? And even if they could take it, would they also get good grades?

If my child were spat on and insulted, I couldn't trust myself not to get a ball bat and knock out a few brains. But I trust Negroes not to, and they haven't.

I think so much of those school children in Little Rock—a small handful who carry the will and conscience, the hopes and futures of millions in their arms. They have not let their people down. I think, what quiet pride their grandchildren can have in them knowing they came of such stock.

And then I think of the faces of the mob that tried to keep them out. What pride can their descendants take in their ancestry? But of course they will forget, or lie, or both.

Perhaps some of the anger against Negroes stems from a profound sense of their superiority, and perhaps their superiority is rooted in having a cause and an unanswerable method composed of courage, restraint, and a sense of direction.

Farewell for Quesada

One of the most controversial figures ever to hold a high Government aviation position is E. R. (Pete) Quesada, ex-Air Force General, who is out as administrator of the Federal Aviation Agency.

Quesada has been one of the hardest workers ever to hold the top federal aviation post since the Government got into the aviation regulation business under the old Bureau of Air Commerce back in 1926. Not only did he inherit a veritable mess when the Civil Aeronautics Act of 1938 was replaced by the Federal Aviation Act of 1958—a mess brought on chiefly from Department of Commerce control of the old CAA and the failure of Congress to provide the necessary funds for modernization—but he came into the big boss's chair under a brand-new agency with responsibilities and powers never before conferred on a federal administrator. He also had a couple of strikes against him before he started because of his predominantly military background.

We do not believe any newcomer could have taken over the tough assignment of heading up the new FAA without creating some bitter opposition and controversial situations. It is not a job for pussyfooters or lame duck political appointees. Individuals and organizations that bitterly attacked Quesada's motives or integrity were "way off base."

He was open to criticism, as is any man, especially for his penchant for being in a hurry—to get the job done, despite all obstacles, in the shortest possible time. He was often undiplomatic and sometimes inept. But he was honest and he played the game strictly on his convictions and on the best staff and industry advice he could get. In fact he was quite in line with the best aviation tradition—vigorous, forthright and determined.

There are two points that should be clearly drawn. One is that the Federal Aviation Act was not written to serve aviation. It was written for the benefit of John Q. Public and what's good for him is supposed to be good for aviation. Second, the aviation fraternity had better grow up and face the fact that administrators of the FAA come and go and that we should fight tooth and toenail for principles and leave personalities completely out of our dealings with the Government.

The day might even come when Quesada's severest critics admit that he was a good one compared to some yet to serve.

Between Book Ends An Excellent History

A HISTORY OF GERMAN LITERATURE, by Ernst Rose. (New York University Press, 353 pgs., $6.50.)

There is hardly a task more difficult and more unrewarding than the attempt to compress the growth of a nation's literature into a book, or even several volumes. In fact, there is no history of literature which could replace, or obviate, the necessity of extensive reading. The best that one can hope to get out of such a book is a general outline of the circumstances under which writers were thriving or sterile.

German literature, on the whole, had only two centuries of greatness: the eighteenth and nineteenth. All other periods were more or less mediocre periods of writing. It is no coincidence that the German literature from the seventh to the seventeenth century is dealt with by the author on 130 pages, whereas the last 300 years require two times as much.

The author's intent was to give the American reader a general picture of the literature in Germany, and since no literature develops and works in a vacuum but is the expression of the thinking of a period, Mr. Rose seeks to tie in each literary era with the political and economic circumstances, on the basis of which books were written.

Altogether, it seems that the author has succeeded in putting together a history which is as impartial and objective as can be expected. The literary historian is always in danger of having to sit in judgment. He feels compelled to evaluate the output of a certain era, to make comparisons, to hand the crown of glory to some, and to condemn to oblivion the many. And this task becomes even more difficult, the closer we get to the present. Are we ready yet to assess the full impact of Thomas Mann or Franz Kafka? Quite obviously, we are much too close to them to say how future historians will view their books.

Suffice it, therefore, to state that this is a very readable, enjoyable and informative history of German literature which can be of value to any reader who wants to extend his knowledge.

WALTER LIPPMANN

New Economic Pact Needed

EXECUTIVE FOR SENATOR CAPEHART, who did not vote, the Foreign Relations Committee is unanimously in favor of the treaty which will make this country a member of OECD (the Organization for Economic Co-operation and Development). The Senate committee has, however, attached to its report an "interpretation and explanation" of the intent of the Senate.

Nothing in the treaty gives the Executive any power "beyond what the President now has." The interpretation is undoubtedly correct. It is surely quite harmless. It is also quite unnecessary, as a reading of the treaty, particularly Article VI, will show. Nothing can be recommended or decided by the organization except by unanimous consent. That is to say, each member has a veto. Moreover, "no decision shall be binding on any member until it has complied with the requirements of its own constitutional procedures." The rights of Congress are wholly safeguarded.

Lippmann.

Thus, in no sense of the word is the OECD a supra-national organization which can override the sovereign power of any nation. What then is it? And why is it important?

For Economic Stability.

The best way to get at what it is to begin by noting that today, without the treaty, the President has the constitutional power to do all that the treaty proposes that he should do.

The treaty commits 18 West European countries plus Canada and the U.S.A. to consult. They are to consult in order to cooperate for economic stability and growth and in assisting the underdeveloped countries.

The President already has the power, if he chooses to use it, to consult with other governments on all of these subjects. If out of these consultations come proposals requiring specific actions, the President must go back to Congress unless the action has already been authorized.

He can spend no money that is not appropriated, he can make no loans that are not authorized, he can change no tariff schedule except as authorized under the trade agreements act.

Common Market Talks.

Why then is it important to establish in a solemn treaty the commitment to consult? It is important because in committing ourselves to consult, we receive the commitment of the 19 other nations which comprise all the great economic powers of the non-Communist world except for Japan. Japan is now a member of the development assistance group dealing with the underdeveloped countries and may join the OECD.

In return for our commitment to consult with them, we get the right to be consulted by them. This is a valuable right as has been shown by the still uncompleted negotiations with West Germany, and as will be shown in the forthcoming discussions about the trade policies of the Common Market countries and the nations of the European Free Trade Area.

It is highly significant that this treaty was negotiated and signed by the Eisenhower Administration, and that it is being ratified under the Kennedy Administration.

New European Conditions.

This shows that before the change of Administration the need which the treaty meets had become clear to President Eisenhower, Mr. Herter, and Mr. Dillon. It had become clear that with the phenomenal economic recovery of Western Europe, in which this country played an historic part, our relations with Western Europe were greatly altered.

At the time of the Marshall Plan in 1948 the relations between West Europe and the U.S.A. were those of beneficiary and patron, protected and protector. With European recovery, though we are still the biggest economic power, the relationship is mutual as between equals.

Instead of the patron and the protector, we are the partner, and to conserve and promote our interest, we need to have recognized, as this treaty does, our right to participate in the discussions, to be consulted, to be fully informed, and to be listened to in the field of high international economic policy.

Promoting Our Interests.

In the time of the Marshall Plan we had the power of the last word. Since the European recovery we shall have in an organization like the OECD the influence which stems from our size, our economic importance, and the enlightenment of our policy.

It is a sign of the times, a very good sign, it seems to me, that we shall be ratifying this treaty not as a favor to our friends handed down from above, but because this treaty provides us with a respectable, a recognized, and an orderly instrument for defending our rights and promoting our interests.

EXHIBITION OF ART

BY JACQUES VILLON

Lithographs, Etchings Shown—Other St. Louis Displays.

By GEORGE McCUE

Lithographs and etchings by Jacques Villon, including book illustrations and other works, make a distinctive show at the Three Arts Shop, 6501 Delmar boulevard, through this month.

In his middle 30s when the Cubist movement was at its height in Paris, Villon was the oldest of the painters in this style, and he never really departed from it. He gave Cubism a refinement that was in contrast with the robust adventures of the younger painters, and held consistently to his statement that the picture "is a creation in which the subject... is translated into areas of color, into a hierarchy of colored planes; the whole is bound together by an arabesque."

The show has a large collection of prints in black and white, and in color. Villon's fastidious color sense is exemplified in "Fleur d'Amandes," a lithograph of large flower petals. The display includes figures and abstractions from "Les Bucoliques" and other publications.

An exhibition of drawings by John Christoforou, a British-born painter of Greek parentage, is at the Martin Schweig Gallery, 4657 Maryland avenue, through March 25.

Most of the works are heads of an exotic people, a synthesis, it would seem, of Mediterranean and Oriental types, with slanting eyes, prominent noses and sensuous lips. The drawing may be a fragile thread of line, to delineate a head which contrasts with a fully modeled face. A man's face is done in pencil and charcoal chiaroscuro, heightened with white and warmed with pink crayon.

The drawing is all in Old Master techniques with pen, pencil and crayon, but with a contemporary vision. It is a small show, but quite pleasing.

The Jo Ann Watts paintings at the People's Art Center, 3567 Grandel square, make a vivacious one-man show. High-key colors in white describe mechanistic forms in "Machines," and in a work unaccountably titled "Fishbones" look like improvisations on electrical circuit diagrams.

There is an agreeable sprightliness in several other non-figurative works, and a change of pace to the familiar is provided in several still lifes of flowers done in cool transparent glazes. The show runs through March 26.

Paintings by Charles Campbell of Arizona at the Norton Gallery, 325 North Euclid avenue, present a mixed character of brilliance of color and thinness of idea. They are oils in high gloss and considerable workings of texture, on panels.

glassy hues, establishes a mood of coldness and cruelty with its blue figure pulling at strings, in a Ben Shahn sort of linear description. This is one that really works. At the other end of the scale is "Ghost Town," a town with a cobweb drawn across it. In between are instances of figures engaged in enigmatic activities that hint at deep meanings but do not quite carry the conviction that there really is any meaning. The show runs through this month.

The Hillis Arnold sculpture show at The Center, 3559 Lindell boulevard, has some small finished works and models, and photographs of larger pieces. "The Lord is My Shepherd," with a man holding a lamb, is the model of a work for Cardinal Ritter's garden. There are a "St. Francis" and "Mary and the Christ Child" in miniature.

The St. Louis Weavers' Guild has a big show of fabrics, wall hangings, rugs and finished suits and coats from handloomed materials at the City Art Museum through March 26. The show is beautifully installed, and there are looms that emphasize the dramatic transition from yarn to finished goods. The group gives Saturday demonstrations from 2 to 4 p.m.

192 SEEK CHORUS OUTPUT RISE CALLED ROLES IN PARK OPERA KEY TO COMPETITION

They Audition for 70 Parts—Chicago Sisters Sing Duet in Tryout.

Sounds emanating from Kiel Auditorium and the American Theater yesterday were a more certain sign of spring than reports of the arrival of robins, or the appearance of tree buds.

At Kiel, fifty young women filled one of the assembly halls with song as they competed for parts in the Municipal Opera singing chorus this summer. The sounds at the American were more restrained, consisting of the shuffling of feet and some heavy breathing as youthful dancers tried out for the chorus before opera ballet master Frank Westbrook.

At stake are 70 parts in the choruses for the new season; 192 aspirants tried out for them on the first day. Preliminary auditions will end with two sessions today.

"Auditions are not easy at best," musical director Edwin McArthur told the singer as he attempted to put them at ease just before the tryouts. An old hand at running auditions, McArthur urged the singers not to become discouraged if they fail to win a place in the chorus this time.

"Study hard, keep improving and come back next year," he advised. "We had one girl who auditioned six times before we selected her."

Miss Linda Leibowitz, 22 years old, of Kansas City, was the first singer to try out. She sang "So In Love."

One of a handful of former members of the singing chorus, Miss Mary Lynne Mettenrich, 19, a student of Marycrest College, Davenport, Ia., was next. Previous membership in the chorus does not guarantee a part in a new season.

During about four hours of tryouts, McArthur and productions director John Kennedy were presented with at least one novel problem. Miss Laurel Twombly, 22, and Miss Gail Twombly, 20, her sister, asked to audition as a pair rather than individually.

It was the first time in the memory of opera officials that a duet was sung in auditions. The sisters Chicago residents who attend St. Louis University, sang "Do Re Mi."

Westbrook, newly appointed St. Louis ballet master, conducted the Yale Professor Warns U.S. Must Cut Costs to Meet Foreign Prices.

American industries must lower production costs through increased productivity or succumb to foreign competitors, Thomas T. Holmes, chairman of the department of industrial administration at Yale University, said here last night.

Addressing the annual Yale Club dinner at the University Club, Prof. Holmes urged the business community to undertake a "three-point crash program in research" to solve the technical problems of lagging productivity. He called for more industrial research, exclusion of military organizations from industrial research and use of data computers for applied research.

Noting that tariffs and subsidies "mark the road downhill" for American enterprise, Holmes advocated direct competition with foreign industries now underselling American rivals both in the United States and abroad.

Such competition would be practical if we could realize "cost cutting through increased productivity," he said.

The problem of maintaining wage scales and employment after cost-saving production methods are introduced may be solved by "rescheduling and retraining" of workers, he said. He also noted a need for "more industrial leaders to understand basic economics" in dealing with foreign competition.

At the dinner Robert H. Charles, executive vice president of Universal Match Corp., was installed as president of the St. Louis Yale Club for 1961-62, succeeding Nicholas V. V. Franchot III.

Other officers elected were William G. Heckman, Richard H. Osborne Jr. and Torrey N. Foster, vice presidents; G. H. Walker III, secretary, and E. G. Hotchkiss, treasurer.

He directed the dancers, most of them teen-agers, in a soft-spoken manner, dividing them into groups of eight and improvising steps for them as he went along. Beverly F. Mercy's Giant-Tamers Upset Kirkwood, Play Crystal Tonight

Jr. Bills Victors by 20 Points

By Bob Ruhl

Mercy High's basketball team doesn't appreciate the description "mighty midgets." The Bulldogs feel it makes them appear as side-show attractions. Maybe they'll like a new moniker, such as giant-tamers.

For Mercy tamed the big one yesterday in Kirkwood, one of the giants of prep basketball here all season. The Bulldogs did it with their pet formula: Play 'em close down to the wire and then beat 'em with free throws.

Mercy handed Kirkwood its second loss of the season, 51-47, in overtime in the quarter-finals of the state Class L tournament at Washington University's field house. The other afternoon game went to Crystal City, 74-49, over Kansas City Southeast.

St. Louis U. High, tough and aggressive, opened night play with an impressive 66-46 triumph over Springfield Central. Washington's unbeaten Blue Jays extended their winning streak to 34 by beating Liberty, 61-45.

Mercy Vs. Crystal City.

Tonight's semifinals start at 7 o'clock with Mercy (24-3) playing Crystal City (26-2). St. Louis U. High (23-5) opposes Washington (34-0) at 8:30.

"These kids are the 'fightingest' bunch I've ever seen," said Coach Jack Mimitz of Mercy after the game. "Off the court the boys are so quiet—they put all their energy into playing basketball."

The afternoon crowd of 4701, the biggest in tournament history, watched the cool-and-cautious Bulldogs take the sizzle out of vaunted Kirkwood. Playing without starter Phil Landes, in bed with a 101 temperature caused by a sinus infection, the Bulldogs never got untracked. Nor were they able to use their running game against Mercy's defense.

The biggest leads in the game were five-point spreads of 31-26 and 33-28 enjoyed by Kirkwood in the third quarter. Mercy's Joe Mimitz netted five straight points near the end of the period to give the Bulldogs a 37-36 lead.

The fourth period was as exciting as basketball can be. But when Mimitz, one of Mercy's star guards, fouled out with 2:19 left in the game, the Bulldogs were in serious trouble. With 1:50 remaining, Kirkwood's Steve Vogeleding hit two free throws to even the score at 45-45. Then with a second to play, Mercy's Bob Donovan, the other half of the guard combination, missed on his free throw that would have won the game.

The score stood at 45-45 at the end of regulation time. Donovan quickly got over the last-second miss and flipped in two free throws in the overtime. Teammates Bill Obermark and Bill Capstick each hit on one free throw, and Mercy had a 49-45 advantage with 1:10 left. Kirkwood's Jim Waller rammed in a rebound, but Donovan hit two more charity tosses with 13 seconds remaining to push Mercy out of danger.

It Will Be a Long Time.

For Kirkwood the defeat was crushing. The Pioneers of Denver Miller lost only twice this season in 29 outings, both in overtime. "We didn't help each other on defense," Miller commented. After a few moments he added: "It will probably be a long time until we have a team as good as this one."

Mimitz, former St. Louis U. star and brother of Mercy player Joe Mimitz, took a few minutes to appraise his team that has become the darling of the tournament.

"Joe and Bob Donovan are the two best backliners I've ever seen in high school," the coach said. "They complement each other beautifully. But I think we have some other boys whom the fans tend to underate."

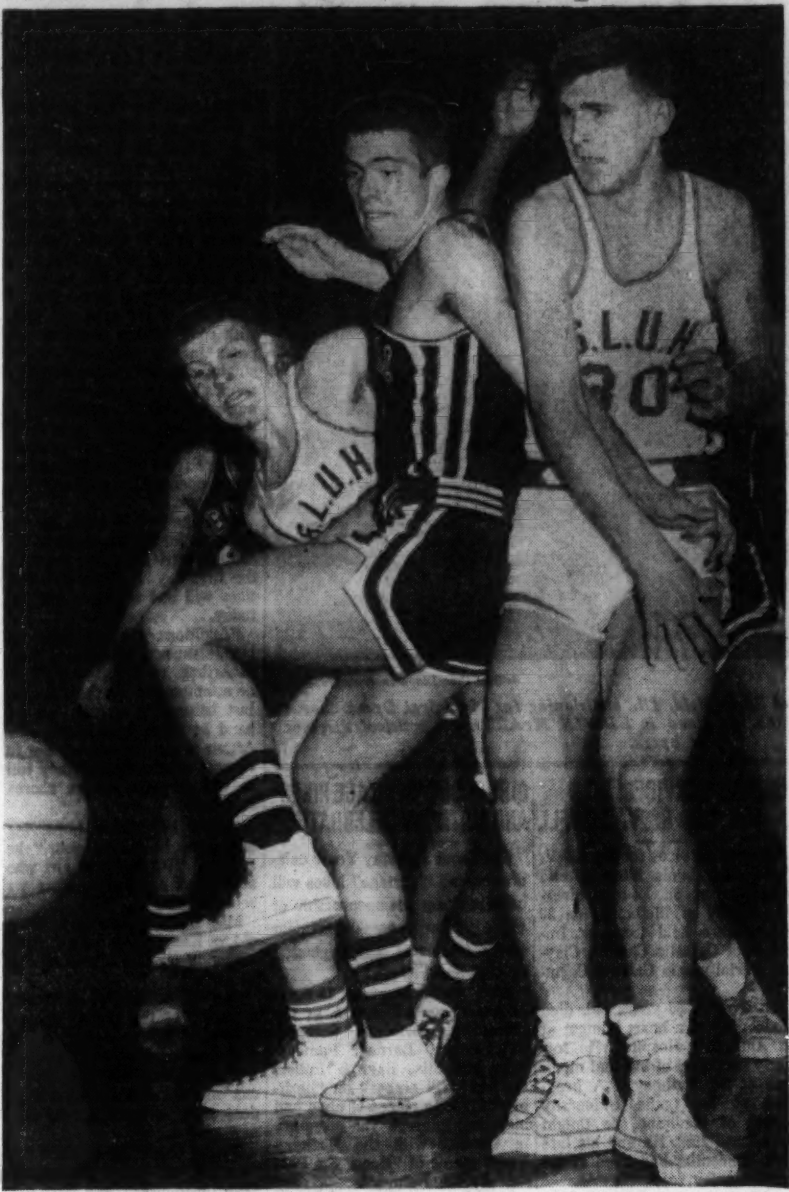

"Jim Baalman (the team's tallest starter at 6-2½) is a senior playing his first year of basketball. He's a great jumper. He does the job on the boards we want him to do," Mimitz continued.

"I think we've got the shortest forwards in state tourney history. Bill Capstick (5-11) is a transfer student from Wellston. He's only been playing since the present semester started. We've lost only one with him in the lineup. Bill Obermark (5-11) is a two-year regular with a 10-point average. He gets a lot of rebounds and is the quarterback on defense."

Mercy scored on 15 of 36 field attempts for 42 per cent and 21 of 33 free throws. Kirkwood tallied 13 of 38 from the floor, 39 per cent, and 17 of 29 free throws. The Pioneers out-rebounded Mercy, 40 to 25.

39 Points for Bradley. Crystal City, scoring on 46 per cent of its shots, 30 of 63, had no trouble with Kansas City Southeast. The Hornets piled up 18 points in each of the first three periods and finished with a 20-point fourth quarter. Bill Bradley, Crystal City's 6-6 senior pivotman, put on a spectacular performance, amassing 39 points and passing for at least 10 more.

Sub Bianchi Key Man As Nats Defeat Hawks

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch
SYRACUSE, N.Y., March 10—Among the 2784 spectators who witnessed the National Basketball Association doubleheader here last night was Jim Pollard, who will coach the new Chicago entry in the league next season. If he was looking for "likely touchables" in the post-season draft he was probably most impressed by the work of Al Bianchi, a Syracuse reserve who helped the Nats turn back the St. Louis Hawks, 129-119.

The Boston Celtics defeated the Detroit Pistons, 119-118, in the opener.

The eight present members of the N.B.A. will have to put all seven of their players up for grabs after the playoffs, so Chicago can build an experienced if not powerful team. It is probable that Bianchi, who has been in and out of the Syracuse lineup all season due to injuries, will be among those available.

"Blinky," as Bianchi is called by his mates, was instrumental in pulling the Nats out of a jam as they ended a six-game losing streak with this triumph over St. Louis.

The Hawks, after seeing Syracuse score 13 straight points while breaking out of a 53-53 tie in the second period, managed to catch up again at 103-all before Bianchi broke their drive temporarily with two goals, one a layup and the other from the corner.

Bianchi added one more along with a foul shot by Barney Cable to offset a two-pointer by Al Ferrari, another of the "likely touchables," but again the Hawks fought back to knot the count at 111.

This time the Nats' John Kerr was the big wheel as Syracuse moved in front 121-113. After Woody Saundersberry moved the Hawks back with a bucket, it was Bianchi's turn to widen the margin once more to eight points and practically insure the victory.

A defensive block of Len Wilkens's driving try for a goal by Kerr preceded Bianchi's last tally.

Thus Syracuse managed to square its Western Division series rivalry for the year at 20-20, although their record with the Hawks was 4-6.

Bob Pettit and Cliff Hagan each had 34 points for the Hawks.

Detroit continued to find the War Memorial here a jinx. Needing a victory to go one game in front of Cincinnati for the third Western Division playoff spot, the Pistons lost a 15-point 71-56 lead to the listless playing Celtics.

Boston caught up and went ahead with exactly one minute to play by a 115-114 count as Bill Russell blocked Bailey Howell's attempted shot and passed downcourt to Frank Ramsey for an unmolested basket.

Howell put the Pistons ahead again with two free throws, but Russell rapped home a jumper with 15 seconds left. Again, Bill blocked a Piston effort and this time K.C. Jones made good on one of three Boston free throws.

With four seconds left on the clock, Detroit called a time-out, but it was the team's sixth of the game and the Pistons were penalized with a technical foul. Ramsey made the free throw. After that there was no Boston effort to stop Gene Shue's last successful try for a basket.

Wilkens was running a temperature before the game and doctors said there are symptoms of a strep throat developing, but he played 40 minutes.

The Nats had an 80-58 edge in rebounding. . . . Clyde Lovellette remained in St. Louis because of his back injury. . . . Schayes's 28 points topped the Nats. Dick Barnett was absent from the Nats' lineup due to a late-developing illness.

Playoffs Tuesday In N.B.A.

NEW YORK, March 10 (AP)—The semifinal playoffs in the National Basketball Association open in Philadelphia and Los Angeles next Tuesday.

The Warriors take on the Syracuse Nationals, but the Lakers' opponent has not been determined. The picture was further complicated last night when the Detroit Pistons lost to Boston and dropped into a third place tie with Cincinnati in the Western Division.

If the Pistons and Royals finish in a tie after Sunday's regular season final games, there will be a playoff Monday night in Detroit. The winner will face Los Angeles Tuesday.

Other playoff dates announced yesterday matched the second-place Warriors against third-place Syracuse in Syracuse for the second game March 16, with the teams returning to Philadelphia March 18.

If a fourth game in the best-of-five series is necessary, it will be played on Sunday afternoon, March 19, at Syracuse with television (NBC). A fifth game would be played March 21 in Philadelphia. The winner of this Eastern Division set will meet the champion Boston Celtics.

The league said that if the Philadelphia-Syracuse series ends after three games, the winner would open at Boston in a TV game March 19. Remaining dates will be announced later.

Los Angeles will also be at home against either Cincinnati or Detroit Wednesday. The remaining games will be announced Sunday. The St. Louis Hawks, Western Division titleholders, will meet the winner of this series.

Halfback Signed By Grid Cards

Charles Bolden, a fast-running halfback from Morris Brown College in Atlanta, Ga., will try out with the football Cardinals this year. He has been signed as a free agent.

Bolden, who competed in football, basketball and track, has run 100 yards in 9.8 seconds. He attended Hamilton High School in Memphis, Tenn.

The new recruit is 6 feet 2 inches tall and weighs 197 pounds. He caught 67 passes for 677 yards and 24 touchdowns in college, and intercepted 13 passes.

3309 Total Bowled In All-Star League

All four All-Star League matches ended in 3-0 shutouts at Arcade Bowling Lanes last night, with the St. Ann team shooting a top series of 3309. Chuck Ostrander led the St. Ann with 757 as they blanked Cove.

Ken Freeman bowled the night's best series, 760, to help the Celucos outdo Kirchner. Other shutouts were by Ferguson over Russell and Ripley over Ragsdale.

SPORT SHORTS

The Polo Grounds, former home of the New York baseball Giants, is doomed. A low-rent housing project will be built on the site, with demolition of the stadium scheduled to start in 14 months. . . . CHRIS CRAWFORD defeated St. Louis's CHUCK McKINLEY, 6-4, 5-7, 6-4, to help the University of Corpus Christi defeat Trinity University of San Antonio in tennis. McKinley and FRANK FROELING defeated Crawford and ANTONIO PALAFOX in the doubles. GABINO PALAFOX stopped Trinity's ROD SUSMAN, also of St. Louis, 6-2, 6-8, 6-4.

WILLIE KIRKLAND can continue training with the Cleveland Indians and won't have to appear in court in San Francisco as previously announced. A superior court judge ordered Kirkland to show cause why he should not be held in contempt for failing to pay $1000 in legal fees and $160 a month support in a paternity case. . . . The Indians sent the court $2000 on Kirkland's behalf.

PANCHO GONZALES defeated St. Louisan EARL BUCHHOLZ, 10-4, in a pro tennis match held in Liege, Belgium.

Missouri's basketball team seems likely to lead the nation's colleges in most personal fouls per game, having averaged 22.2 per game with one game remaining. . . . The Tigers' CHARLES HENKE is tenth among individual scorers with a 25.0 average.

The Glove Doctor

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., March 10—Harry Latina sat watching in the grandstand one day at Sportsman's Park in 1926 as the Browns' Ken Williams, tagging up at third base on a short fly ball, charged home and, though apparently off, knocked the catcher's mitt off the left hand of the Athletics' Ralph (Cy) Perkins.

The ball not only rolled free, giving St. Louis a run and hurting Perkins's feelings, but the Philadelphia catcher was hurt physically, too, when Williams accidentally spiked Cy's instep.

That evening, accompanying Joe Hauser, Philadelphia first baseman with whom he had played semi-pro ball in Wisconsin, Latina visited an unhappy Perkins in his hotel room.

Why, Latina wanted to know, didn't catchers wear leather loops inside their catching mitts to keep the hand from sliding loosely inside the inflated pillowcase?

Perkins didn't know and really wasn't too interested, but he had a suggestion to the young man who was superintendent of the factory at Rawlings, St. Louis sporting goods' manufacturer. Couldn't Harry come up with an extension of the shingard that would protect catchers' vulnerable insteps?

Before Perkins could say, "Help, here comes Mickey Cochran!" Latina had tacked felt onto a fiber backing and used leather hinges to give the veteran catcher pliability as well as protection.

Shingards were involved, but that was the day Bud Latina became, as he is so well-known in the trade, "the glove doctor of baseball."

DiMag's Half-Step

Today, 39 years and 15 patents after he joined Rawlings, Latina, at 66, is semi-retired. However, he continues to make his annual spring swing of the training camps to help display his company's newest wares and, equally important, to create goodwill by repairing or altering players' favorite gloves. Latina's other nickname—"Doc"—was given him by Joe DiMaggio in 1947. DiMag watched Harry oil and repack Charley Keller's glove. When the glove doctor agreed to help Joe get more service out of an ancient and honorable favorite, the Yankee Clipper was overjoyed.

A year or two later, when troublesome Achilles tendons had slowed DiMaggio, Latina consoled him. "You've lost only a half-step, Joe," he said, "and I'll give it back to you."

He encouraged the great outfielder to use a newer-model, larger glove to help make up for the inches difference in the fly ball caught and missed. Yes, with the bigger, better gloves used now, Harry would like to have seen some of the master fielders.

"No matter how good they were with the skimpy leather pieces they wore then, they would have been better with these gloves," he said, aware that, for instance, such fine shortstops as Honus Wagner, Dave Bancroft, Donie Bush and Joe Cronin were charged with 60 to 70 errors a season.

Latina must have a point. The two finest hitters of the recent 20 years, Ted Williams and Stan Musial, agree on the two factors most responsible for lower batting averages—the slider and better gloves.

Bill Doak's Idea

The modern masterpiece of leather craftsmanship is a by-product of the biggest advance in baseball gloves. Remember the Bill Doak model?

Doak, spitball pitcher with the Cardinals, walked into the Rawlings plant late in World War I with a suggestion. Instead of two pieces of flat leather sewed together, why not build up the heel, like the cushion of the cupped hand, to form a natural pocket to catch the ball?

Long after Doak was counting his royalties, his glove was the most popular used and, Latina recalled, at one time Rawlings made 97 per cent of the glove used by professionals. The St. Louis firm still is the leader in its field, but, like much of American industry, is feeling the pinch of cheaper Japanese labor as well as healthy internal competition.

The Doak glove, though it marked a turning point in baseball equipment, would look as completely outdated now as a DC-3 against a 707 jet. The larger glove with U-shaped, rather than V-shaped, pocket has the loops Latina first wanted to put into Cy Perkins's catchers' mitts, so that the fielder's hand no longer has to be thrust to the tip like a kid glove to be secure.

In fact, for maximum automatic pocket action, the modern glove should be worn loosely on the hand, snugly at the wrist, Latina said. The two most popular professional models at present are the Stan Musial and Ken Boyer gloves, he said.

The glove doctor credits Eddie Miller, former Cincinnati star shortstop, with having given him the idea for the U-shaped pocket and webbing. Many of Latina's other innovations resulted from composite conversations with players during his annual spring tour and

League Is Proposed For Boxing

RENO, Nev., March 10 (UPI)—A National League of boxing and not a Federal Boxing Commission is the answer to a permanent clean-up of the sport, the former chairman of the Nevada Athletic Commission said yesterday.

Dr. Joseph Elia contends that if the commissioners of all the states would meet, they could iron out their differences and clean up boxing.

His plan calls for a league to be formed of the managers and fighters on the same basis as the National Football League or big league baseball. All managers would then be licensed again.

Next, the fighters would be rated on a national basis and the top two would fight for the championship with the next rated boxer to get first crack at the title.

"Under this system, integrity and public confidence would be restored to the fight game which it is lacking now," Elia said. "Of course I feel that any change would be for the better now but this type of organization would put boxing on a solid footing."

Elia, a former physician of the New York Athletic Commission, said a central clearing house could be set up to rate the fighters and to keep their records. After a boxer suffered a knockout, he would automatically be suspended for 45 days in all states and there would be no risks to his health.

"Can't you just see the advantages?" he asked. "Why, this would bring safety, uniform control, and the same judging and rules throughout the nation."

The program would not allow boxers to hold outside jobs during training periods.

"This seems only fair. Why, who ever heard of a baseball player working eight hours and then going to the baseball field for a three-hour game?" he said.

Elia concedes that the pursa of the fighter would have to be raised and he says the managers would have to carry the financial burden at first. But he could collect his extra money when the fighter achieves some ranking.

"But whatever we do, let's do it now," he concluded. "The sport cannot last much longer under present conditions."

Gene Ruth, a high school diving champion at University City, is continuing his success in college. He captured his third straight Ohio Conference crown last week at Akron, O. His Kenyon College team won the meet for the ninth consecutive year.

'Old Kentucky Home' People Will Help Honor Hawks' Hagan

By John J. Archibald

People from Owensboro, Ky., who used to refer to one of their young basketball stars as "Big Cliff," will be at The Arena tomorrow night to help honor the man, though he is now known as "Lil' Abner."

It will be Cliff Hagan Night. Friends and admirers will pay tribute to the player in ceremonies between halves of the game with the Philadelphia Warriors. The 8:30 contest will be the last regular season game for the National Basketball Association Hawks.

"In both high school and at Kentucky U., I was always a center," said Hagan. "Being 6-foot-4 and weighing about 200 pounds made me a pretty big man, especially in high school. That's where I was known as 'Big Cliff.'"

When he came to the Hawks in the fall of 1956, however, Cliff found that he was not only small to think about playing the post, but he was considered too short to be a forward. A few months' trial as a guard didn't impress anybody and Hagan was close to being traded.

On Feb. 15, 1957, Bob Pettit suffered a wrist fracture. This misfortune for Bob turned out to be a bit of good luck for Hagan, for it gave him a chance to play in the front line. Cliff has been a regular forward for the Hawks ever since.

His comparative lack of stature and his Kentucky background resulted in Cliff acquiring the nickname "Lil' Abner." The quick-thinking Hawk actually is quite unlike the bumbling comic strip character of that name, however. He repeatedly outfoxes opponents on the court and is regarded as a shrewd business man in his off-court activities.

Among the thousands who will be on hand for Hagan Night will be Cliff's wife, the former Martha Jean Milton. Martha was a drum majorette at Owensboro High, where she and Cliff dated regularly. The Hagans have two daughters, 4-year-old Lisa and 3-year-old Laurie. This has been a fine season for Cliff. His point average for three previous seasons as a regular was 22.8, and he has averaged 21.9 as the Hawks coiled to another Western Division title in the current campaign.

Chamberlain Nears 3000 Mark as He Scores 67

27 Baskets In 37 Tries For Wilt

PHILADELPHIA, March 10 (AP) — Wilt Chamberlain has passed another milestone in his fabulous career, cracking a 12-year-old Philadelphia Warriors' club record by scoring 67 points in one game.

The 7-1 Chamberlain's output last night in a 135-126 victory over New York was the most points he's ever scored in a single game and it broke the 1949 mark of 63 by Joe Fuiks. His previous high had been 58.

Chamberlain fell five points short of breaking the National Basketball Association record of 71 set by Elgin Baylor of Los Angeles last November. Up until the 1959-60 season, Fuiks' mark had stood as the N.B.A. record, but Baylor cracked it with 64 a year ago.

Elsewhere in the N.B.A., Bill Russell's field goal with 15 seconds left gave Boston a 119-118 victory over Detroit, dropping the Pistons into a tie with Cincinnati for the only remaining playoff spot in the Western Division.

Each club has two games left to play. Detroit meets the Warriors at Fort Wayne tonight and the Knicks at New York Sunday. Cincinnati plays at Los Angeles Saturday and Sunday.

Chamberlain, who now needs only 16 points in the Warriors' two remaining games to become the first player in the history of the N.B.A. to score 3000 in a single season, attributed his performance last night to "being hot and well rested." The Warriors had a three-day layoff, unusual for the N.B.A.

Chamberlain connected on 27 of 37 field goals and 13 of 17 free throws as the Arena crowd of 2216 cheered him on. He passed

Midgets With Gigantic Soccer Record

The Carondelet Sunday Morning Club produced an undefeated midget soccer team which won the Khoury League championship, defeating the Ward Team, 3-0, and 4-0, in the playoffs. Most of the boys in the 12-13 age group have played on five championship teams. This season they won 20 games, scoring 70 goals to just two for the opposition. Members of the squad: First row, from left: Team mascots JIM VILLA, ROBBIE MARSEK, MIKE MARSEK and BILLIE MARSEK. Second row: TOM FREIVOGEL, STEVE BRUHIN, RON MARSEK, JIM HARASHE, WARING SCHMIDT, GARY BRASER, MIKE VILLA. Third row: JOHN MUELLER, ED ROESCH, BUD BENDER, STEVE GLIGROS, TOM ROZYCKI, MIKE WAMSER, JIM GARCIA. Last row: FRANK VILLA, coach; RICH WROBEL, FRED ROULX, RAY MARSEK, manager; GENE SANDERS, ED MARSEK, manager. Earl Reidel, coach, and Gary May were not present when picture was taken.

Someday, said Wilt, he hopes to break Baylor's mark.

Chamberlain's feat last night added to numerous other milestones — becoming the first rookie to score 2000 points and setting a new N.B.A. season scoring record while doing it in the 1959-60 season along with seven other league marks, then surpassing the scoring record this year.

What was there left, someone asked.

"The goal I started out with," replied Chamberlain. "To bring a championship team to Philadelphia."

Chamberlain said that last night's game, shooting-wise, had been the greatest of his career. But his greatest satisfaction, he said, was the first N.B.A. game he ever played.

Leonard Says Carbo Put Pressure on Him

LOS ANGELES, March 10 (UPI)—Defense attorneys today were expected to continue trying to break down the story of former Hollywood Legion promoter Jackie Leonard, key government witness at the extortion-conspiracy trial of Frankie Carbo and four others.

Carbo, Frank (Blinky) Palermo, Joe Sica, Truman Gibson Jr., and Louis Tom Dragna are accused of trying to "muscle in" on the contract of former welterweight champion Don Jordan by using threats and other illegal means.

Leonard testified yesterday he went to Chicago three years ago to "stand trial" before Carbo, who recently completed a New York prison term for underworld boxing activities.

Defense attorney William Beirne asked Leonard what he meant by "standing trial."

"Just that," answered Leonard. "I went there to see him and have him bowl me out."

"Didn't you tell him at this time that you would give him half your fighters if he got you a championship fight?" the attorney asked.

"What fighters?" said Leonard. "I never had no fighters. I was a matchmaker. I didn't get any fights."

"I just got bawled out by Carbo."

Leonard also testified yesterday he consented to a "deal" to let Jordan fight then champion

Illini Dream Of Upsetting Ohio State

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch

CHAMPAIGN, Ill., March 10—Illinois' basketball team has the opportunity to erase a lot of bad memories here Saturday by ending its season with a spectacular upset, but its chances of beating Ohio State are minute.

There is no basis for establishing hope the Illini can upend the Big Ten champions unless the Buckeyes themselves relax too far after clinching their second successive championship last week.

Illinois can look back to its own history for encouragement in similar situations. In 1949 and 1952 when the Illini wrapped up Big Ten titles before the season ended, they dropped their finale to second division clubs Michigan and Wisconsin.

However, the Buckeyes are driving towards announced goals which would be derailed by a defeat here Saturday, and they aren't likely to be caught in a lackadaisical mood.

Sullivans Tops in Classic

DETROIT, March 10 (UPI)—A bowling team that never rolled together until two weeks ago stole the show from the big-name stars last night at the American Bowling Congress tournament here.

Stu's Drive-In of Urbana, Ohio, rolled a 3027 series to take the lead in the regular team division. The pick-up team of three Urbana bowlers and two from nearby Springfield, Ohio, had games of 957, 1011 and 1059, as it became the first quintet to better 3000.

The Sullivan Furnitures of Detroit, completed their sixth game Classic Division appearance and finished with a 5720 total for first place in this division.

Amster-Kirtz of Akron, Ohio, finished its Classic play with 5674. The Sullivans rolled 2930 last night to go with a 2790 opening set, while Amster-Kirtz had 2795 to pair with 2879.

Joe Astolino of Urbana, anchor man and captain of the new regular division leaders, picked up his club among friends. He signed brothers Charles and Bob Egan of Urbana, and added two Springfield bowlers, Bob Swishhelm and Danny Powers.

Charles Egan led the team with 679, Swishhelm followed with 635, Bob Egan had 604, Astolino 600, and Powers 509.

The Your Steel Supply team of Toledo, Ohio, moved into second place in the regular division with a 2911 series. Former leader in this division was DeGeorge's Service Station of Philadelphia, with 2910.

Billy Golembewski of Detroit, held the Classic all-events lead with 1875, while his Sullivan teammates, Bob Hitt and Therman Gibson led in Classic doubles with 1295. Hitt led the Classic singles with 628.

Frank Dickes of Detroit, took the regular all events lead from Orville Smith of Dayton, Ohio, by 11 pins at 1845. Joe Santek of Kalamazoo, Mich., and the Chicago team of Ed Johnson and Walter Crossno held their leads in the regular singles and doubles.

Epiphany Triumphs

Epiphany, paced by Jim Graves and Jim Powers, won the C.Y.C. junior basketball title with a 60-49 victory over Holy Redeemer on the St. Mary Magdalen court. Graves scored 22 points and Powers 17. Mike Hohl had 17 points for the losers.

State Meet

He also pulled down 20 rebounds. His 29 points gave him a four-year prep total of 3905, probably the most ever registered in Missouri high school basketball.

"The boys played a fine game," said Crystal's Arvel Popp. Asked about Mercy, Popp went on. "We've come up against the deliberate style before, and I think we can cope with it. I hope so anyway."

St. Louis U. High's Hank Zuchowski set a school record. His 30 points gave him a season's total of 606, breaking the mark of 596 set by Tom Kiefer, now of St. Louis U., in 1958. Kiefer's record was made with the 1958 state championship team that had a 28-0 record.

St. Louis did a complete turnabout from its close game against Pattonville in the opening round. The Junior Billikens, playing a tight defense, were in command all the way. They led 34-20 at the half.

"We moved the ball tonight," said coach Emmet Hanick. "We weren't forcing the shots, and the boys were getting the ball to the open man. This was as good as we have looked this season."

Washington's Blue Jays were having trouble with Liberty at the start and trailed, 12-8, after the first quarter. But Glen Cafer's team turned to its pressing defense in the second quarter and Liberty fell into mistake after mistake. At the half, Washington had a 30-15 lead. Liberty was able to score only three points, all free throws, in the second quarter.

Liberty straightened out in the last half, but Washington was on its way by that time. The Washington-St. Louis U. High game should be a good one. But as one Junior Billiken player said: "We don't feel any pressure now. We think we can go all the way."

(The semifinal games in the Class I. tourney will be broadcast tonight over KSD and KMOX, starting at 7 o'clock. Bob Ingham will handle the KSD play-by-play and Jack Buck for KMOX.)

Five Upset
In TourneyWINSTON-SALEM, N.C.,
March 10 (AP)—A 92-82 upset
by Winston-Salem Teachers College has knocked three-time champion Tennessee A. & I. out of the N.A.I.A. basketball tournament for the first time in six years.The Negro school from Nashville, rejected by the National Invitation Tournament, lost last night in the District 29 N.A.I.A. playoff here."We got beat by a good team on a hot night," A. & I. coach
Harold Hunter said. Winston-
Salem coach C. E. Gaines agreed. "I expected to win," he said.A. & I. first went to the N.A.I.A. in 1954, losing to Regis in the first round. The Tigers missed the 1955 tournament, then started their five-year string in 1956, winning the championship in 1957, 1958 and 1959, a record. Last year, they won their third place.A. & I., which also produced Olympic champions Ralph Boston and Wilma Rudolph, tried this year to get in the N.I.T., but was turned down on the ground "no small college teams invited for previous tournaments lived up to expectations."The action drew a protest from the New York branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People against what it called a "run-around."Winston-Salem won last night's game at the four line, hitting 34 of 43 free throws and A. & I. committed 27 fouls. A. & I. hit
50 per cent of its field goals,
34 of 69, but managed just 14 of 22 free throws.Cleo Hill sparked the winners with 38 points. A. & I., the nation's second-ranked small college team in the final Associated Press poll, was led by Rossie Johnson with 30.

CITIZENS' SCHOOL CANDIDATES WIN YOUNG G.O.P. AID

The five candidates for the Board of Education supported by the Citizens Association for Public Schools were endorsed last night by the St. Louis Young Republican Club in a meeting at the Chase Hotel.

Edward S. Stemmler, president of the club, said the members decided to support the five candidates because they present a united front for the betterment of the public schools. He added that the five C.A.P.S. candidates have both the ability and the qualifications to give the school board the right kind of leadership.

Stemmler said the only other candidate seriously considered was Charles W. Corey Jr., an independent candidate. The endorsement of the five C.A.P.S. candidates came by voice vote on a resolution that they receive the support of the St. Louis Young Republican Club.

Candidates endorsed: James S. McClellan and Mrs. Gilbert Harris, present board members; Frederick E. Busse, James E. Hurt Jr. and Elmer W. Pounds. The C.A.P.S. candidates, Corey and John D. Connaghan, another independent candidate, spoke at a meeting of the club last month.

The other three candidates, Frederick O. Whaley, John J. Nally and Patrick J. Walsh, were invited but did not attend, Stemmler said.

Elimination of waste of money and channeling of funds directly into the education of St. Louis children were called for last night by Connaghan at a meeting of the Lindenwood Neighborhood Association, Lindenwood Park Auditorium, Jamieson and Park avenues.

"It is essential that we attempt to educate every child to his fullest potential," Connaghan said. He added that recommendations made by a circuit court grand jury for improving the school system should be carried out.

McClellan told the Lindenwood association that election of the C.A.P.S. candidates offers "the best assurance of job protection for non-teaching employees in the school system."

Strong Merit System.
"A strong-merit system for non-teaching employees is an absolute must, not only for the good of the schools, but also for the good of the employees," McClellan said.

"Many of our most serious problems stem from an outmoded administrative setup," Pounds said. "Yet, certain board members have persistently failed to take corrective action."

Busse told the Lindenwood association that "while certain board members were pursuing their own selfish interests, many of our schools grew seriously overcrowded."

"Then, when the board sought passage of a bond issue for new schools, the voters showed a lack of confidence in the board by rejecting the bonds," Busse added. "I am certain that when the citizens see the board is working for the good of the school children they will support necessary improvements."

Hurt told the association: "Much as we would like to confine our whole campaign to the

CUBA PAPER SAYS U.S. GIFT VACCINE WAS OUTDATED

HAVANA, March 10 (AP)—United States Navy authorities gave outdated poliomyelitis vaccine to Cuban Red Cross workers fighting polio in eastern Cuba, the semi-official newspaper Revolution charged today.

The newspaper charged the vaccine delivered Tuesday, carried a sticker showing its expiration date was Dec. 16, 1960. A picture of the purported sticker was published on the front page.

Delivery of such vaccine proved President Kennedy's cynicism, the newspaper said, was "a vile attempt to make political propaganda."

Mr. Kennedy announced at his press conference Wednesday that R. Adm. Edward J. O'Donnell, commander of the United States Navy base at Guantanamo Bay, approved delivery of polio vaccine to Guantanamo city authorities through the American and Cuban Red Cross organizations. The vaccine was free.

TEAMSTERS' STRIKE CLOSES SAN FRANCISCO WATERFRONT

SAN FRANCISCO, March 10 (AP)—Striking Teamsters closed San Francisco's waterfront last night as a dispute over cargo handling spread from Los Angeles and Long Beach.

The strike started in Los Angeles-Long Beach harbor Tuesday. Teamsters started picketing in San Francisco yesterday when the manager of Pier 37 refused to allow them to transfer coffee bags from Longshoremen's piers to Teamster piers.

A pallet is a movable platform for easy handling of cargo. A new automation contract between ship owners and the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union provides for a single pallet, with about $5,000,000 in compensating pay promised for work lost by the change.

Teamsters demand either the same work or compensating pay for themselves.

DISMISSAL OF STUDENTS FOLLOWED BY VANDALISM

MILTON, Mass., March 10 (UPI)—The president of Curry College said today an investigation is being made of damage totaling $1000 which occurred to a dormitory less than an hour after eight students were dismissed for low marks.

Dr. Donald W. Miller denied a published report that the smashing of walls, furniture and windows developed in a riot. He said college authorities and police were investigating the vandalism.

The college president said "honestly didn't know" whether the damage was related to a hunger strike last week when a group of students refused to eat in the college cafeteria.

Miller said he knew of no direct connection between the hunger strike and the dismissal of the eight students.

subject of education, we feel the quickest route to better schools is to correct some of the long-known weaknesses in the non-teaching areas."

OPTIMISM IS VOICED BY LIVESTOCK GROUP

Despite another decline in business volume in 1960, officials at the annual meeting yesterday of the Producers Live Stock Marketing Association expressed satisfaction with last year's performance and optimism for the future.

Harry D. Wright, veteran manager, told about 400 members at the Sheraton-Jefferson Hotel that prospects for the current year "are very encouraging from a volume standpoint" and "we expect to have as good or better business in 1961."

John D. Fehsenfeld, Troy, Mo., president since 1950, reported that "1960 was not our largest year, but one of the better ones." He announced a patronage refund to members of about $50,000, representing 10 per cent of selling commissions collected during the year.

The manager in his report noted that during 1960 the equivalent of 15,610 cars of stock of all classes were handled, a figure comparing with 15,863 in 1959; 15,284 in 1958; 17,798 in 1957 and 19,118 in 1956.

During the 12-month period, he said, Producers handled a total of 825,840 head valued at $57,053,638. In 1959, it was 870,229 head valued at $57,198,445.

Asked about the decline in volume, he said it reflected general market conditions. Another Producer spokesman confirmed that it represented the unrelenting competition with other cattle sales agencies such as direct buyers by packers and sales barns.

By a large chart, Wright listed for the group the 10 leading counties in Missouri and Illinois in volume of shipments. Macoupin with 626 cars led in Illinois and Boone with 454 was tops for Missouri.

Following in Illinois were Pike, 625; Montgomery, 435; Randolph, 391; St. Clair, 385; Madison, 360; Bond, 312; Sangamon, 309; Clinton, 309, and Greene, 309.

The other nine in Missouri were Saline, 348; Shelby, 328; Cape Girardeau, 298; Calloway, 257; Perry, 235; Monroe, 231; Cooper, 230; St. Genevieve, 225, and Lewis, 200.

P. O. Wilson, Chicago, secretary-manager of the national group Fehsenfeld heads, pointed out that cash receipts from livestock and products last year in the bi-state area of Missouri and Illinois totaled just under two billion dollars, an amount he said was 60 per cent greater than that received for crops.

At an election after lunch in the hotel's Gold Room, three incumbent directors were renominated for three-year terms. They are Fehsenfeld, L. J. Todd, Harvel, Ill., and W. E. Williams, Texarkana, Ark.

Others on the board are Russell Smith, Pittsfield, Ill.; Robert Bartels, St. Marys, Mo.; Arthur Weber, Sparta, Ill., and Theodore Anderson, Montreal, Mo.

Education Bill FRB BUYS 3 TIMES MORE LONG-TERMERS

NEW YORK, March 10 (AP)—Federal Reserve System open market purchases of United States Government securities maturing in 1 to 10 years were almost three times greater last week than they were the previous week, the reserve's weekly statement showed today.

The bank bought $202,000,000 of notes and bonds maturing in 1 to 5 years and $35,000,000 of bonds maturing in 5 to 10 years. In the previous week purchases of this type totaled $81,000,000.

In the week ending Feb. 22—the first following reversal of a 10-year-old policy limiting reserve operations to short-term securities—purchases of long maturities totaled $13,000,000.

The purchases are designed to nudge longer term interest rates, a stated policy of the Kennedy Administration and the Reserve Board. In addition the purchases increase member bank deposits, making more funds available for lending and thus tend to ease credit.

However, other factors tended to restrict the lending capacity required reserves, declined $205,000,000 from the previous week to a daily average of $515,000,000.

Member bank borrowings averaged $94,000,000 daily compared with $50,000,000 the previous week.

LENDING CAPACITY OF BANKS LESSENED DURING WEEK

NEW YORK, March 10—Daily average borrowings by member banks of the Federal Reserve System rose by $44,000,000 to $94,000,000 in the week ended Wednesday, the Federal Reserve Bank of New York reported.

Daily average reserves in excess of requirements declined $162,000,000 to $515,000,000. This produced daily average net free reserves—excess reserves less borrowings—of $421,000,000, down $206,000,000 from a revised figure the week before.

At the end of the statement week, borrowings were up to $156,000,000 from the previous Wednesday at $203,000,000. Excess reserves were up $115,000,000 to $629,000,000. As a result, net free reserves on Wednesday were down $41,000,000 from a revised figure the week before at $426,000,000.

Member bank reserve requirements are based on weekly averages of daily figures.

LOCAL BANK CLEARINGS IN EXCESS OF LAST YEAR

Clearings usually looked upon as a business barometer totaled $4,116,000,000 from January 1 to date in St. Louis Clearing House banks. This is the first time this year that cumulative clearings exceeded those of a year ago.

For the comparable period clearings were $4,090,700,000.

RECENT STOCK FAVORITES CUT BACK SHARPLY

NEW YORK, March 10 (AP)—

The stock market closed mixed today with the ticker tape late in a final burst of trading. Turnover for the day was very heavy.

While key stocks showed minor gains and losses, some widely traded issues appeared among special-situated stocks.

Allegany common was the apparent volume leader, closing fractionally higher after rising more than a point earlier in response to the threatened proxy fight.

Profits were taken in a number of recent gainers.

Brunswick, in another hectic session marked by a halt in trading for the issue, dropped another 4 points while its running mate, American Machine & Foundry, fell half a dozen points.

The market was irregular from the start and cross current of profit taking and switching broke up the trend.

Brunswick and American Machine & Foundry were battered by profit taking. Trading had to be halted for about an hour and a half in Brunswick as sell orders were matched. It reopened on a huge block of 35,000 shares, down 5 1/2 at 65 1/2. It clipped about a point from the loss last week.

American Machine & Foundry was down a half dozen points.

Sterling Drug advanced about 5 and International Business Machines about 1 1/2. Lehn & Fink plummeted more than 9.

Profit taking and switching confused the trend. Litton Industries fell about 3 and Beckman Instruments more than 4.

Johns-Manville rose about 3, gains about a point were scored by Kennecott, Union Carbide, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and American Research.

Reichhold Chemicals was up about 2 points after a block of 23,400 shares were sold at 20 1/2.

General Telephone & Electronics, Boeing, General Motors, Allied Chemical and Sperry Rand were fractional gainers.

Slightly lower were U.S. Steel, Chrysler, Amco, Eastman Kodak and American.

The ticker tape lagged as much as five minutes behind transactions.

American Stock Exchange late prices were mostly higher in heavy trading. Allegany warrants were very active and fractionally higher. Mad Johnson Plywood, Technical Operations, spurted 4. Microwave Associates, Syntex and Empire National rose more than a point each.

Real Trusts Equal Stock Mutuals?

By SAM DAWSON
NEW YORK (AP)—The mutual funds of real estate investing? That's what some in that large and varied field are hoping the upcoming real estate investment trusts will prove to be.

Many expect them to appeal to the same type of small investor who flocked to the mutual funds rather than to buying of individual stocks, on his own.

The new trust funds were given tax benefits at the last session of Congress. But those eager to set them up quickly found the act's generalities needed clarifications. And the initial excitement died down for a time.

Now investors are awaiting special regulations by the Internal Revenue Service and the Securities and Exchange Commission, expected shortly. These would exempt such trusts, if they meet certain restrictions, from corporate income taxes.

Investors would pay a tax on dividends received, but the dividends would be based on net income after the government has taken up to 52 per cent as in the case of most corporations.

New York real estate investment leaders say that, to be exempt from the federal tax, the new trusts will have to show a minimum of 100 shareholders, distribute 90 per cent of the earnings to investors, get 90 per cent of these earnings from pure real estate investments, and refrain from management of any property the trusts own. (Specialized firms are available to take over management chores of apartment houses, etc.)

Small investors are expected to be able to buy trust certificates much as they do shares in mutual funds. These certificates will represent part ownership in the trust's holdings and can be freely traded.

The trusts could be of various types. Some might specialize in owning apartments, or industrial properties, office buildings, stores, hotels, shopping centers, motels, or in raw land for development or speculation.

Real estate men expect some of the new trusts to be combinations of these.

Example: A trust might include property on which a steady income is likely along with other holdings low in current return but high in expectations of increased valuation with the years.

When and if the real estate trusts get going, the sales talk for them is likely to be similar to that for mutual funds.

That is, they would offer diversification of property holdings such as the individual investor would be unlikely to afford by himself. The accent, too, would be on the professional efficiency and shrewdness of the experts operating the trusts. This the individual might not be able to match or to find the time to acquire and keep sharpened.

Also the shares in such a realty fund might be easier to sell than would property itself if quick cash is needed.

A realty fund might get going in various ways. One or more individuals might put property already owned into a portfolio, receiving for it shares in the new investment trust. These would then become salable to the public.

Or an investment trust might start without any property at all. It would first sell shares in itself, if it could, and use the money to buy property.

At a meeting here of the newly formed National Association of Real Estate Investment Funds, it was noted that in addition to awaiting rulings by federal agencies on tax exemption, any incipient trusts might require changes in some state laws before operating fully.

As an example, New York state laws were cited that might raise the question: Who really has title to a property placed in such a trust, in the sense of being free to sell, mortgage or otherwise dispose of it?

Furnishings Show, Trade Fair at Arena Next Week

A series of talks on subjects pertaining to home decoration will highlight the special events being planned in connection with the Greater St. Louis Home Furnishings Exposition and World Trade Fair to be held at the Arena from March 13 to 19, inclusive. These are scheduled for 3 p.m. each day.

On Monday, the opening day of the exposition, the speaker will be Tom Putnam of Columbia, Mo., president of the Eastern Missouri Division of the American Institute of Decorators. He will discuss basic steps in planning a decorative scheme, considering points of special interest to the average homeowner.

Tuesday afternoon's speaker will be Dave Bixeman, who will demonstrate processes of furniture stripping as a preliminary to refinishing. After the furniture has been stripped in a professional manner, the do-it-yourself enthusiast then proceeds to refinish according to his own selection and preferences. On Wednesday there will be a special display of copper products for the home and a talk by Mrs. Doris Wood on the many different copper items to fit into a variety of decorative schemes. Functional uses of copper as well as fashionable trends will be discussed in her talk.

Creative ideas in place settings will be the Thursday afternoon subject. Fine glassware, china and silverware selected for a harmonious and impressive ensemble will be shown by Don Ingardner of Hess & Culbertson. He also will give some pointers on the care of these table appointments.

Two Per Cent Boost Seen In Building

Everett Schneider, a vice president of the Home Builders Association of Greater St. Louis, reports there may be a 2 per cent increase in the nation's housing production in 1961. He represented the local builders at a conference just concluded in Washington on the business outlook.

Schneider said the 2 per cent boost was the consensus of leaders in the home-building field who met with government housing officials, staff members of congressional committees and private housing consultants.

The conference was sponsored by the National Housing Center, headquarters of the National Association of Home Builders in Washington. The builders' officer of the local association was one of 40 to participate.

"Low-priced housing is expected to lead the market, with three builders out of five predicting an upturn in this sector," he continued. "Less gain is expected in the medium- and high-priced housing markets."

At least two-thirds of the builders attending the conference expected housing in specialty areas such as housing for the elderly, housing for minority groups and vacation homes to continue at last year's levels. Three builders in five foresee gains in the remodeling and home-improvements markets.

Schneider emphasizes that the perennial problem of mortgage money is of less concern this year than in the past. He said builders were more concerned about the general economic climate. More than half of the builders reported the supply of mortgage and construction money decidedly better, and most of the balance recognized there has been some improvement.

"Compared to periods of past economic crises in the building industry," he concluded, "the sentiment was notably low for special government assistance, and the primary complaint at the local level was aimed at impractical building codes and zoning regulations."

Lemay Factory Building Bought By Woman

Mrs. Rose Muschong has purchased from Adolph and Arthur Rhomburg a one-story brick, factory property at 2054-60 Happy Lane, Lemay, and has leased it for a long term to the Muschong Metal & Manufacturing Co., Griffith & Groves reports.

The property has 12,000 square feet of space under roof, with 1500 square feet of air-conditioned office space. The office area has acoustically tiled ceiling, asphalt tiled floor. The tract, an acre, is cyclone fenced.

There are 20,000 square feet of paved storage yard and a parking lot to handle 30 cars at a time.

In moving from 2615 DeKalb street, the manufacturer increases plant floor space by 50 per cent.

Griffith and Groves was agent in the deal.

42-Lane Bowling, With Billiards For River Roads

Bill Spencer, bowling expert, has leased 42,000 square feet of space to be prepared on a lower level of the River Roads Shopping Center property, Jennings road at Halls Ferry, for operation of bowling lanes.

The lease, for 20 years, with renewal options, was made on a minimum guarantee and percentage basis through L. J. Sheridan & Co., agents for the development. Forty-two lanes are to be equipped with automatic pin setting machines, the area will be air-conditioned, and there will be billiard and pool tables, a cocktail bar, snack shop, etc.

The project is to be called River Roads Lanes.

The Spencer family has long been prominent in bowling. John Spencer Sr. built a 24-lane, clear-span line of alleys in Chicago more than 30 years ago, one of the first such clear-span establishments in the nation.

NEWSWEEK BOUGHT BY WASHINGTON POST

© New York Times News Service
NEW YORK, March 10—Control of Newsweek magazine was purchased yesterday by the Washington Post and Times-Herald from the Vincent Astor Foundation.

Sale of the news magazine ended several weeks of intensive negotiations in which several possible purchasers displayed interest in the publication.

It was understood that the price paid for the 59 per cent interest held by the Astor foundation was about $3,000,000.

There was no announcement of personnel or policy shifts. It was understood Osborn Elliott, now managing editor of Newsweek, would have editorial direction of the magazine. The top editorial post is held now by Malcolm Muir Jr., whose title is executive editor.

The business management of Newsweek was expected to continue under the direction of Gibson McCabe, now president and publisher.

The Washington Post and Times-Herald was represented in the negotiation by its president, Philip L. Graham. The Astor Foundation was represented by Luke B. Lockwood and Allan W. Betts, trustees of the Astor foundation.

Astor was the principal owner of Newsweek from 1937 to his death in February 1959. Newsweek is the nation's second largest news magazine with a circulation of 1,442,836.

Malcolm Muir, publisher of Newsweek and its principal executive since 1937, sought unsuccessfully to put together a syndicate which would take over the Astor holdings.

It was understood that the remainder of Newsweek stock includes about 12 per cent held by W. Averell Harriman and smaller blocks owned by Muir, his family and some other Newsweek associates. It was not known whether Muir and his associates would accept the Washington Post and Times-Herald offer for their stock. It was understood that Harriman had indicated his willingness to sell at the terms arranged by the Astor foundation.

Purchase of Newsweek is the initial venture into the magazine field for Graham, whose association with the Washington Post and Times-Herald dates from 1946.

MRS. GLADYS MEYERS HEADS SUBURBAN SCHOOL GROUP

Mrs. Gladys Meyers, a teacher at the Heege School, Affton District, was elected president of the St. Louis Suburban Teachers Association for 1961-62 at a meeting of the house of delegates last night at Riverview Gardens High School.

She succeeds Norman Loats, assistant superintendent of the Riverview Gardens District.

Other officers elected were: Vice president, Noah E. Gray, superintendent of the Lindbergh School District; second vice president, Fred Larason, science teacher at Maplewood-Richmond Heights High School; secretary, Mrs. Dorothy Whitman, principal of Kampville School, St. Charles county, and treasurer, R. R. Eddleman, director of guidance for the Hazelwood School District.

The house of delegates adopted a resolution urging that teachers be given duty-free lunch hours and that school terms be made uniform. The association represents teachers in 35 school districts in St. Louis county and St. Charles county.

APARTMENT BUILDING FIRE FORCES OUT FOUR FAMILIES

Four families were forced to leave their homes by a fire which burned out the three-story apartment building at 1236 North Kingshighway yesterday. No one was injured.

Forced to move elsewhere were Mr. and Mrs. Adam Miller and their five children, Mrs. Norma Jean Henderson and her three children, Mr. and Mrs. Otis Scharborough and their four children and Mrs. Mattie Miller and her three daughters.

Police said the fire started from defective wiring in the Scharborough's apartment. Damage was estimated at $1000 to the building and $200 to its contents. The Red Cross assisted in finding the families places to stay.

'The Secrets of Long Life'

What are the secrets of long life? Do our nation's senior citizens have certain characteristics or traits that have contributed to their longevity?

To find out, George Gallup and journalist Evan Hill took a representative sampling of all Americans 95 years old or older. The result is an informative book, "The Secrets of Long Life," which will be serialized in the Post-Dispatch Everyday Magazine beginning next Sunday, March 12.

This revealing study offers you the opportunity to apply these oldsters' secrets of longevity to your own life. You'll learn how they have lived, worked and played—details about their heredity, diet, exercise, temperament and self-indulgences. In addition, you'll find a unique self-scoring test to determine your own chances for a ripe old age.

CITES ECONOMIC IMPACT OF DAMS ON WHITE RIVER

By THOMAS W. OTTENAD
A Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, March 10—The economic growth of southwestern Missouri after construction of a series of multiple-purpose dams in the area indicates the value of a sound natural resources policy, Senator Stuart Symington (Dem.), Missouri, said Wednesday.

In a speech to the Senate, Symington said there has been rapid development in the last 10 years in the area of the Bull Shoals, Taneycomo and Table Rock dams on the White River. A recent economic survey showed that bank deposits in the area rose from $2,400,000 in 1950 to $9,000,000 last year, he noted. In the same period bank loans rose from $960,000 to $4,515,000.

Annual income from tourists has jumped from $3,500,000 in 1953 to $10,000,000 last year, Symington went on.

He pointed out that Taney county, where most of the development has occurred, is the only county in the area to show a gain in population. Since 1950 its population has increased by 3 per cent while four counties surrounding it have shown declines ranging from 6 per cent to nearly 25 per cent.

Practically all of the growth in Taney county has taken place near the lakes created by the three dams, Symington noted. The impoundments provide recreational facilities, flood control and hydro-electric generating capacity.

"An average of more than 100,000 visitors monthly came to the new Table Rock State Park this past summer," Symington stated. "All facilities were almost continuously occupied."

"In the last five years practically all major denominations have built new churches. Large numbers of retired persons have moved into this area."

Symington used the experience of southwestern Missouri to support President Kennedy's proposal, outlined in a recent message to Congress, for an accelerated program of development and conservation of natural resources.

The choir also will sing at services Sunday in the Messiah Lutheran Church, 2846 South Grand boulevard, and will present a concert at 7:30 p.m. Sunday at Grace Lutheran Church, 1425 Ferguson avenue, Pagedale.

$2000 STOLEN FROM STORE

A total of $2000 was stolen by burglars from the Watson Furniture store, 2100 East Grand avenue, police reported yesterday. Entry was gained through an insecure second-floor window between 7 p.m. Monday and 7:45 a.m. Tuesday, Robert B. Watson, owner, told police. The burglars knocked off the dials and punched out the combinations of both the outer and inner safes in the store office, police said.

Mrs. Kennedy Opens Show.
WASHINGTON, March 10 (AP)—Mrs. John F. Kennedy, in her first official public appearance since the inauguration, cut a ribbon yesterday to open the national capital flower and garden show.

EX-AMERICAN CALLED TRAITOR TO CASTRO

HAVANA, March 10 (AP)—Maj. William Morgan, who gave up his American citizenship to fight in Fidel Castro's army, was pictured by his former chauffeur as turning double agent against the revolutionary regime.

The Castro regime, which once built up the 31-year-old former United States paratrooper as a national hero in Cuba, is demanding the death penalty in trying him now on charges of aiding anti-Castro rebels.

Morgan, who is from Toledo, O., was outwardly calm in the courtroom in denying the charges.

Mario Marian, who once served as Morgan's chauffeur, took the stand last night as the final defendant among 13 called before a military tribunal at La Cabaña fortress.

Marin testified Morgan had conspired against the regime, had shipped arms to rebels in the Escambray mountains and had been in contact with the rebels.

The prosecution demanded 30-year prison terms for Marin and the other defendants.

Marin was seized last month as an Escambray insurgent.

The court recessed after Marin's testimony when the lawyer appointed to defend both Marin and Morgan said his legal role was now incompatible.

Luis Carro, the lawyer, termed Marin's testimony "a hidden ball trick."

Earlier Morgan took the stand and was asked if he sought help from the now-closed United States embassy after his arrest last October.

"No, and I wouldn't accept it if they did," Morgan replied. He described two executed insurgent leaders who the government said were his contacts as "personal enemies of mine."

Morgan had given surprise testimony in 1959 against several Cubans and helped convict them of that conspiracy, an anti-Castro conspiracy that originated in the Dominican Republic. It was his role then as a double agent for Castro who lured the conspirators into a trap that made him a national hero.

Despite his agility, his team lost.

Maritime milestone is in the making with the approach of a tugboat to Hong Kong on the business end of a long tow Feb. 28. In tow is a 24,000-ton former United States aircraft carrier, the Bairoko. The 1200-horsepower tugboat Atlas took the carrier in tow at San Diego, Calif., last November, using a three-inch steel cable. Only one stop was made, at Hawaii, for provisions, during the 10,000-mile voyage to the Orient, where the carrier will be cut up for scrap.

Jim Bishop Big John Leaves Memories Behind

MIAMI, March 10.
BIG JOHN HAS GONE HOME. He was here almost two months and they were rich ones. The little villa seems hollow and dusty without him. He used to boil a pot of prunes at 10 p.m. for the morning breakfast. They were bubbling and

JIM BISHOP

At other times, we had long conversations about politics, the family, sports and the future. He seldom mentions anything I write about him and once I said: "Have you had time to read today's column?" He nodded. It was about him.

"Did you like it?" He looked sideways at me, opened his mouth, and closed it again. The snowy hair, neatly parted, and the dignity of expression give him the look of a retired judge. Or one who has been caught. "What was wrong with it?" I said. He shook his head. "Nothing. I don't want to get into an argument with you."

"Come on," I said. "What was wrong?" He looked at me and said: "Twinkling blue eyes, my eye. I haven't got blue eyes, twinkling or untwinkling."

"Holy mackerel!" I said. "Out of all the things I've written about you, you have to pick on one tiny item. What color are your eyes?" He curled his lip. "Why don't you take a look, Mr. Reporter? They've been brown all my life. Doesn't accuracy mean anything in your business anymore?" I looked at his eyes. The brows are shaggy and gray and one has to look under them to see. "They're blue," I said. "They're brown," he said. "Okay," I said. "Then I can't detect color."

We started out to play golf. He was in new plaid shorts and a white shirt. He wore dark blue tennis shoes and regular socks. They kept falling down. His teeth were grinding. One could hear the grating of the cup and saucer 80 feet off.

A woman passed by. "Excuse me," I said, grabbing my father, "what color are his eyes?" She glared at me. "I beg your pardon," she said. I apologized. "He says they're brown. I claim they're blue." The lady became cool and composed. She knew that she was dealing with two nuts and this was no time to panic.

She studied my father. "Hazel," she said. "They're hazel." My father smiled gallantly. The lady was in his age group. "Thank you ma'am," he said. "You're right. I always put brown on my automobile license, but hazel is the proper word." Her chest started to heave a little. I didn't know whether to leave them, or stay.

"Well," she said, "they're hazel all right. A little more blue than gray or brown, I'd say." She smiled shyly. "Sort of twinkling blue." I glared at my father. We thanked the lady and departed. "Well?" I said. He grunted. "She's color blind," he said.

Sometimes he would tell an old story and we'd start laughing and he'd shake his head and wipe his eyes. He's Irish, and Roman Catholic to the core, and his Gaelic stories are the best. He also made a lot of new friends: John Ogden, the maître d'; Tom Parker, the golf pro; a few stout ladies who wanted him to correct their golf swing, among other things; the cashier at the drug store, the bell captain, and others. He had a ball.

The best laugh I had with him was the morning of the Presidential inauguration. He was in the bathroom, trying to hold his pajama bottoms up while shaving, and I was at the television set, watching the inauguration. Cardinal Cushing was delivering a long and eloquent benediction, and I yelled: "Come on out. You're going to miss the proceedings."

My father came out of the bathroom. He was holding the pajama string in one hand, the razor in the other, and his face was half lathered. He looked at the Cardinal and he saw blue smoke coming out of the lectern.

"Isn't that just like the Irish," he murmured. "They're hardly in the White House and already they're setting fire to the Capitol." ...

I miss him.

Ann Landers

Wife's Nose Knows

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I need help bad. I am married to a sniffer. Yes, that's what I said. She has a nose on her that would put a hunting hound to shame. The minute I step inside the door she says, "Who did you have a drink with?"

ANN LANDERS

Or, "Swell perfume—somebody you work next to, I suppose?" If I have a mint in my mouth she'll say, "What are you trying to cover up with that mint? Where've you been?" Last week she said, "Your coat smells of heavy smoke. The tavern by the shop, eh?"

What beats me is the dame is always right. I get so mad I could crown her. Is there any way I can come out ahead?

Dear Doc: No. She has your number. Play it straight and don't try to outsmart her. She'll win every time—by a nose.

DEAR ANN: My husband and I need some advice regarding our 17-year-old daughter. She has been going steady, against our wishes, for three years. The fellow is 21. Last month he gave her an engagement ring—also against our wishes.

Our daughter always wanted to be a nurse. Her fiancé told her he doesn't want her to be a nurse. He has advised her that in the fall she must enroll in the university where he will be a senior. He says if we refuse to send her to his university she should go to work and save toward their marriage.

Does he have the right to dictate to her just because they are engaged? Or should she listen to her parents? S.W.

Dear S.W.: Of course she should listen to her parents, but she didn't listen to them when she was 14 or 17 so what makes you think she will listen now? Don't put all the blame on the boy for "dictating." Your daughter takes orders from him because she wants to. You lost control of her many years ago.

CONFIDENTIAL TO IN DOUBT: Stop following him. Where is your dignity anyway?

Courage Marks the Lives of MS Mothers

Multiple Sclerosis Victims Continue to Contribute to the Lives of Their Families

ROSE FREEDMAN

By Clarissa Start

OF the Post-Dispatch Staff.
THE THREE YOUNG WOMEN had taken a drive on a pretty day to call on the fourth. It took the three quite a while to get from the station wagon into the living room. Not because it was such a pretty day. Not even because they were, all three, walking with canes, crutches or other assists. It was rather because each insisted on opening the door for the others yet no one wanted to have the door held for her.

This is typical of a certain kind of courage and pride that marks the MS Mothers of the Year. Victims themselves of multiple sclerosis, the crippling disease which is one of the medical mysteries, they still help others with MS. Sometimes by as simple a means as opening a door or offering a word of hope. At this time of the year they serve by working for the annual fund-raising campaign of the National Multiple Sclerosis Society, a campaign to raise money for research which may benefit some MS patients some day.

The three callers were the 1958 MS Mother, Pat Wessling, 1959's St. Louis and later national MS Mother, Betty Hayden, and the 1960 mother, Rose Freedman, all of St. Louis county. They were visiting the 1961 MS Mother, Janice Schuttenberg, of St. Charles.

All four mothers will be honored by the women's division of the Multiple Sclerosis Society at a tea in April.

"You'll find it's a wonderful experience being mother-of-the-year," Pat assured Janice.

"You'll meet the nicest people in the world," Betty added.

"You'll get all kinds of phone calls," said Rose, "from people who have MS but have never had a friend with MS. I was amazed at how many called me, all of them wanting to know about my experiences so they could compare them with theirs."

There are other calls, they agreed, calls from salesmen who have seen their name or picture in the paper. "Why should I want to buy storm windows because I'm MS Mother of the year?" asked Janice. "Lots of people think you make a mint out of this," replied Pat. Calls from health faddists promoting vitamins and drugs which will cure all. From religious groups who believe the answer is to be found in their church.

"I agreed to join more churches," said Betty Hayden, "because people insisted I'd be cured if I'd join. They were doing it out of the kindness of their hearts and I just couldn't refuse. The people are all so good and kind and sweet and thoughtful; I love them all."

Betty is the optimist of the four young women, who are very different personalities despite the many things they have in common. They are alike in that all are housewives and mothers of young children and normally would be at the peak of their energy output.

Multiple sclerosis is a disease of the young adult; usually it strikes the central nervous systems of those between age 20 and 40. Thus far incurable, its effects are progressively crippling. When it is the mother of the family who is afflicted, family life is altered considerably.

"I'm a finicky housekeeper," said Janice, whose small new house is spick and span and shining. "Some days I have a burst of enthusiasm, iron, clean, even bake a cake. The next day I can't do a thing."

"You sit down to iron, of course?" Pat asked.

"They all laughed. 'Is there another way?'"

"They compared difficulties with getting cleaning help."

"Do you find your cleaning girls quit when they find you're incapacitated?" Betty asked. "I let my special girl go to a neighbor who's very sick and needs her more than I do and now I find I can't get anyone."

"I've found the same thing," Rose said. "When they find you're just going to sit in a chair and not help them, they don't come back."

"Some are superstitious, too," said Pat. "They think this may be something contagious."

Most of their household help comes from their husbands and all four feel their husbands deserve medals if not halos. Pat's husband is A. J. Wessling, an accountant, and they have a son, David, 8. Betty is married to Gene Hayden, manager of the budget and stock control division, Ralston Purina Co. Their children are Debbie, 10, and David, 9. Rose is the wife of Dr. Milton Freedman, a psychologist, and the mother of Jill Holly, 9, and Stephen, 6. Janice is Mrs. Robert Schuttenberg. Her husband is a machine operator and they have two sons, Mark, 12, Richard, 7.

"My husband is wonderful about helping," Janice said. "The other Sunday he was cleaning and I said, 'You shouldn't have to be doing that,' and he said, 'You shouldn't have to be lying there either.' Just the way he said it made me feel so much better."

Just then Richard came in with what appeared to be a stuffed animal. It wrinkled its nose and we all squealed. "It's alive." We talked about hamsters and other family pets.

Like other young mothers, these four had been physically active and are still and not very happy about being on the sidelines. Janice would love to be able to go bowling again. Rose recalls enviously watching a friend swimming and diving last summer. Pat proudly states that she rides a bicycle and then, as eyebrows are raised, adds, "A stationary bicycle." Betty, the irrepressible one, tried howling. "You can do anything you want to do badly enough."

"Well, almost," she amended with a laugh. "I wanted to go figure skating this winter. I had my son go upstairs and get my skates. I put them on. They felt good on my feet. I stood up. I started wobbling and put one arm around my husband's neck. He helped me down to the ice. Once step and — whoops. That was it."

Afflicted with the same illness, the same problems, the four MS mothers react differently. Pat Wessling has a matter of fact acceptance, tries to go on with "business as usual" as much as possible, even has a part time job in advertising research, monitoring commercials.

Janice, quiet, thoughtful, sees "no rosy side to MS" but is not embittered by it. Devoutly religious, she finds much help in prayer and has written a prayer to St. Jude Thaddeus which she sends to all who request it.

Betty, who also finds her religion a bulwark, is spiritedly, insistently optimistic. She works as much as possible at the office of the St. Louis area chapter of the National Multiple Sclerosis Society, feeling that "doing something positive" keeps nega-

"Betty and I have discussed this often," she said. "I never wanted to have anything to do with the society or with others with MS. I've worked in hospitals."

"Betty, on the other hand, says it makes her feel better to get with others, that it's encouraging."

"In a way it is," Pat agreed. "You see someone who's been bad and now is getting around without a cane or crutch."

"Like Betty," said Janice. "She was bad and came up again. Maybe I'll be better soon."

"Don't 'maybe' it, Janice," Betty said intensely. "You will."

Janice, confined to a wheelchair at the moment, valiantly fighting against another prolonged period of hospitalization, is apologetic because she will not be able to be as active in personal appearances, radio and TV as were the others. With the help of friends, she is working hard on the fund-raising campaign. One gimmick: miniature aprons, asking the recipients to give a penny or nickel donation corresponding to waist measurement.

"With the help of other workers here we're sending out 800 letters to people in St. Charles," she said.

"Eight hundred letters?" Richard, still cradling his hamster, picked up his mother's remark. "Gosh, mama, do you have that many friends?"

"I hope so," his mother said. "Not friends that we know personally, Richard, but people who will be friends to our cause."

"Betty and I have discussed this often," she said. "I never wanted to have anything to do with the society or with others with MS. I've worked in hospitals."

"Betty, on the other hand, says it makes her feel better to get with others, that it's encouraging."

"In a way it is," Pat agreed. "You see someone who's been bad and now is getting around without a cane or crutch."

"Like Betty," said Janice. "She was bad and came up again. Maybe I'll be better soon."

"Don't 'maybe' it, Janice," Betty said intensely. "You will."

Janice, confined to a wheelchair at the moment, valiantly fighting against another prolonged period of hospitalization, is apologetic because she will not be able to be as active in personal appearances, radio and TV as were the others. With the help of friends, she is working hard on the fund-raising campaign. One gimmick: miniature aprons, asking the recipients to give a penny or nickel donation corresponding to waist measurement.

"With the help of other workers here we're sending out 800 letters to people in St. Charles," she said.

"Eight hundred letters?" Richard, still cradling his hamster, picked up his mother's remark. "Gosh, mama, do you have that many friends?"

"I hope so," his mother said. "Not friends that we know personally, Richard, but people who will be friends to our cause."

YOU ARE SOUTH, neither side vulnerable. The bidding has been:

West North East South

1 ♠ Dble. Pass

What would you now bid with each of the following hands?

1. ♠72 ♥86432 ♦KJ94 ♣J8

2. ♠Q984 ♥Q7 ♦K2 ♣Q8753

3. ♠753 ♥AJ984 ♦K96 ♣Q8

4. ♠4 ♥K853 ♦AJ75 ♣KQ84

5. ♠863 ♥KQJ7532 ♦5 ♣J8

1. Two hearts. The takeout double by partner indicates he has an opening bid or better and that he wants us to bid. In responding to this request to bid, we show no particular strength by simply naming a suit (unless we jump the bidding.) As a matter of fact, the response to the double is frequently made with a very poor hand.

The response is made in the longest suit. The absence of high-card strength in hearts should not be allowed to affect the choice of suits. As usual, the goal is to find the longest trump suit, not necessarily the strongest.

2. One notrump. This bid implies greater strength than a suit response would show. It is an encouraging bid. The notrump response shows a balanced hand that includes about eight high-card points and some strength in the opponent's suit. It is therefore preferred to a response of two clubs, which could be based on a much weaker hand.

3. Three hearts. Here again, care must be taken to inform partner that he has found us with a good hand. Game is just around the corner, once partner doubles, and the way to announce it is to jump to three hearts with our good five-card suit and 10 high-card points.

4. Two spades. There should be no doubt that there is game in this hand somewhere, but it is not advisable to convey the message by jumping to three hearts, diamonds or clubs. Partner would expect a longer or better suit if we were to make any of these bids.

Instead of trying to guess

5. Four hearts. There is no question about the suit in which we want to play the hand, and we can express this view forcibly by going directly to four hearts. It is hardly likely that four tricks will be lost. There is no suggestion of a slam connected with this leap to game. The bid merely announces heart length sufficient to warrant a game contract opposite a take-out double.

Boiled Linseed Oil Certain painting and finishing jobs call for either raw or boiled linseed oil but don't think you can turn raw linseed oil into boiled by pouring it into a pan and heating over a fire because this won't work. If you need boiled linseed oil, you'll have to buy it that way from a paint or hardware store.

"IT WAS VERY, very nice. A damn good story," said the Sporting News' volatile publisher, J. G. TAYLOR SPINK, about the recent story on him in Sports Illustrated magazine. The profile, written by GERALD HOLLAND, native St. Louisan and a former member of the Post-Dispatch sports staff, deals frankly with Spink's low boiling point; his instinct to harass, his network of informers and his personal feuds. Some persons close to Spink had expected him to blow his top. Oh, there were a few things that hurt, Spink said, referring to a paragraph minimizing the baseball weekly's stand against the old Federal League and the more recently proposed Continental League, and the part it played in uncovering the Chicago Black Sox scandal. But the hurt wasn't deep enough to keep Spink from sending an inscribed wrist watch to Holland. Incidentally, the story's play picture, showing Spink glowering over his glasses as he read the prepared, 90-minute story of his life to Holland, was taken by the publisher's son, C. C. JOHNSON SPINK. For the shot, the magazine sent the younger Spink a check for $275.

KIDNEY CAVALCADE is the name of the drive for funds being conducted by the Kidney Disease Foundation of Greater St. Louis. Already in operation is the foundation's drug bank to provide victims of nephrosis, nephritis and allied kidney disorders with needed drugs at greatly reduced cost. Chairman of the foundation's Social Services Committee is MRS. EDWARD BLEVINS, 2524 Shirley avenue, Jennings. "As a parent of a child suffering from nephrosis," Mrs. Blevins related, "I am personally aware of the terrible financial drain which the long-range use of the prescribed drugs places on a family. I am thrilled that our new drug bank will help other families to weather the onslaught of bills which we had to face alone." The foundation's address is 4910 West Pine boulevard, Room 247, St. Louis 8.

The first was BETTY MCCORKLE, who left Ralston in 1944 to become manager of the food division for Scruggs. When she resigned recently to get married and move to Brooklyn, ROSEMARY BURNS, 3728 Nelson drive, Arbor Terrace, moved from Ralston to succeed her. The job entails supervision of the food and bakery departments for all Scruggs stores.

SPEAKING OF JOBS, two St. Louis students are wanted by the Daimler-Benz auto works in Stuttgart, Germany. They would serve as guides for English-speaking guests at the auto plant from April to September, at a daily pay of $4.50. The students will pay their own passage overseas; they can stay at the plant for an additional year as salaried workers. Applicants need not be able to speak German. The person to contact is FREDERICK E. KERN, (EVergreen 5-2890), executive director of the Institute for World Cultural Relations. As part of the institute's promotion of cultural relations between St. Louis and Stuttgart, MAYOR RAYMOND R. TUCKER recently engaged in a book swap. After receiving the Stuttgart Book (a description of the city), he mailed to DR. ANDY GRIFFITH still has an option at Warners for one picture at $100,000, but his TV show is doing so well he won't have time for quite a while to make a movie. . . . Pretty 15-year-old Britisher Jill Hayworth—she plays Karen in "Exodus"—has decided to make New York City her permanent home, and will finish her education there following various public appearances with the movie. . . . 20th Century-Fox is bulging with writers—36 at last count. That's a lot in these days of few and far between movies.

Muscle-man Steve Reeves, who made good in Italian pictures, will be getting $200,000 and a percentage of his next epic. The former Mr. America is thinking of becoming an Italian citizen. Taxes are lower over there. . . . Sir Ralph Richardson, so good as the major general in "Exodus," describes acting as like running after a bus—if you miss it, you fall flat on your face. Joyce steered the tipsy doctor through the crowd, and watched him take the stricken man's pulse, while everyone waited with bated breath for the verdict. "Well?" asked Joyce finally. "Well," answered the doctor firmly, "the poor fellow's dead, but I'll see what I can do."

Regardless of Hazards, All Go Back

Explosions, Gas, Shifting Ceilings Take Their Toll, but the Men Return to the Mine

By

Edward A. Higgins Jr.

A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Staff.

TERRE HAUTE, Ind.,

March 10.

"I BOUGHT MYSELF A brand new name plate," drawled a young barrel-chested Indiana coal miner, holding aloft a black leather belt with a brass identification plate riveted to it. "That's a good idea, you'll likely need it one day before too long," remarked a veteran miner dryly.

The other miners, leaning against a grimy concrete-block building that passes for an office, or sitting on empty, up-turned soda cases, said nothing. They knew what the veteran meant. They had just spent some 12 hours groping in the ebony caverns that wind along the Wabash river valley in search of the bodies of their friends.

There were 22 in all, struck down by a violent explosion 250 feet below the earth's surface. For many, the name plates were the only means of identification. Their features had been obliterated either by fire, or the concussion, or both.

When the Viking mine seven miles northwest of here reopened, about 100 miners who were lucky enough not to be around when the methane gas blew men and equipment asunder will go back into the tunnels, each wearing his identification tag, an ominous reminder that the same fate could be his.

Through a quirk of nature or human carelessness, or, as was often the case in years gone by, outright negligence, a coal miner may be killed or disabled for life any time he descends into the grimy, dusty depths of a mine. The miners accept the risk matter-of-factly, without bravado. They cannot explain why they keep going back.

"I quit once, for a whole year, but here I am back at it again," said a soft-spoken veteran of 18 years in the Indiana and Illinois mines. "I don't know why I came back. I just did. Couldn't stand all that fresh air and daylight, I guess."

Even in the most up-to-date, safest mines, danger is ever present. Gas, like the gas that brought a violent end to the lives of the 22 married men, every one with children, is one of the most feared hazards. It's one that a miner can expect to encounter at any time. He carries a gas detector, a device that looks like a small lantern, and if he is working in a newly-opened area he is supposed to stop every 30 minutes and hold his gas meter aloft to see if the odorless enemy is lurking along the low ceilings. If gas is there, the flame in the lantern will rise rapidly, in the shape of a dove's tail. When gas is detected, the miners don't clear out. They divert air from the ventilating system into the "gassy" spot, rendering the gas harmless. But gas is not the most feared hazard. The one the miners dread most is what they call a "bad top," that is, a weak ceiling in a shaft. Vibrations from mining machinery or a slight disturbance in the earth can send tons of coal and rocks and clay tumbling down on a hapless miner.

Rex Lauck of the United Mine Workers Union, one of the team of UMW investigators sent from Washington to find out what caused the Viking explosion, said that "bad tops" kill more miners than gas.

"Of course, the gas explosions are more spectacular because they kill dozens, even hundreds, of men at once," Lauck noted. "But year in and year out more miners die from 'slate falls' than anything else."

The Viking mine has "good tops," the veterans said. "We've lost only one man from slate in the 15 years this mine has been going," a miner said, a note of pride in his voice.

"Used to be, in the old days," explained another miner, "you could hear a vibration and that told you that slate was moving. That was before they got all this machinery, like those continuous mining machines. Now, with the noise those things make you can't hear vibrations. You just have to keep your eyes open and every once in a while reach up and feel the top to see if it's moving any."

Reaching up to feel the top is easy enough, at Viking at least. In the working areas the ceilings are no more than five feet high, usually are closer to four feet.

The miners in the areas where the coal is being cut out work on their knees, chopping the large chunks that the continuous mining machine has gouged out, shoveling, or loading the coal onto conveyor belts. The belts carry the coal to the "main line," that part of the shaft in which track has been laid. From there, coal cars take the coal to the mine entrance, a distance of as much as three miles in some cases. The trip takes almost an hour. Along the "main line" the ceilings are high enough to permit miners to stand upright.

Though coal slides kill more men than gas explosions, there is the meager consolation that a miner can survive the collapse of a ceiling. Maimed, yes, but alive. Gas explosions of any proportions seldom leave survivors. At Viking, there wasn't a man who had ever been inside a coal mine who held out the slightest hope that survivors would be found after the explosion.

"If the fire doesn't get you, the concussion will," explained a solemn-faced miner. "If you survive the concussion somehow, you'd probably suffocate because the fire uses up most all the oxygen. If then you were still alive, the carbon monoxide gas these explosions leave would get you."

The cardinal rule in case of a gas explosion is not to run—the rolling, tumbling mass of flames will overtake the fleetest miner. The only chance for survival is to drop face downward to the ground. Gas, being lighter than air, hovers near the top of the shafts. If the explosion is not severe, the flame will travel along the top of the shaft, then suddenly bounce back to the starting point and roar out again, doing this over and over until it spends itself.

If there is coal dust in the air, and there usually is, the gas fire will ignite it, engulfing the entire shaft in an awesome roar of flame.

Union, company, Federal and state investigators are searching painstakingly to find out what ignited the gas at the Viking mine Thursday night a week ago. To the miners, this phase of the investigation is pointless.

"We're not allowed to smoke in the mines, but we're allowed to use machinery that sets off sparks," remarked a miner caustically.

What does puzzle the miners is how such a large amount of gas could accumulate. Routine checks with the gas detectors should have disclosed the presence of the deadly methane, the miners said. There was speculation that the gas built up in a pocket at an unusually rapid rate. Investigators think the miners in one section knew there was a gas leak—the electric power for the continuous mining machine had been cut off, the first step taken when gas is detected. But apparently the explosion cut them down before they could do more than disconnect the machine.

"They ought to close that section off," said the young miner with the new belt and the barrel chest. "I sure don't want to work right there in the same spot where those men were killed. You never can tell when the same thing is going to happen again."

Replied another miner: "You never know when it's going to happen, or where it's going to happen. You'll go back down there, and you'll work right in that same spot if they tell you to."

"Yep. Reckon I will."

Island Holidays For St. Louis Group

By Margaret Allen Ruhl

AT LEAST SIX St. Louisans are having a holiday in Eleuthera, the island in the Bahamas which this season has caught the fancy of socially active local families. More are on their way south to join them.

—Diane Cox Photograph
MRS. MORSE . . . Vacationing on Eleuthera.

The six now basking in the sun at Governor's Harbor are Mr. and Mrs. Francis D. Seward, Mr. and Mrs. Charles L. Thompson and Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Morse. The Thompsons left St. Louis some time ago and the Swards and Mrs. Morse departed a week ago. Mr. Morse flew down Saturday to join them, and all are staying at French Leave.

Mrs. John N. Marshall will arrive on Eleuthera Monday after a brief visit with friends in Palm Beach, Fla., and Miss Jane Allen Connett will fly south tomorrow. She will spend tomorrow night in Nassau and will be on Eleuthera Sunday.

Except for the Swards, the group will return in about a week. Mr. and Mrs. Seward will remain for a longer vacation and will motor home. On their way to the island they stopped in Winter Park, Fla., to see Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Palmer, who moved there a few months ago.

Mr. and Mrs. Whitelaw T. Terry, 6235 Wydown boulevard, have returned from a late winter trip. Departing early last month, they were at the Balmoral Club in Nassau and later at the Jupiter Island Club in Hobe Sound, Fla.

Returning a few days ago from a two-week visit in Nassau were Mr. and Mrs. Clinton L. Whittemore Jr., 9855 Litzinger road, Ladue, and Mr. and Mrs. John H. Hayward, 4943 Pershing place. They were at the Lyford Cay Club.

Former St. Louisans on Visits Here

SEVERAL FORMER ST. LOUISANS have returned to their homes after early spring visits here. Among them is Mrs. Sweeney Olmsted of Denver, who was the guest of Dr. and Mrs. Theodore E. Sanders of the Oxford apartments, 5290 Waterman avenue. Mrs. Olmsted came here from New York, where she saw her daughter, Miss Mary, a student at Manhattanville College in Purchase, N.Y.

Yesterday Mr. and Mrs. Edward G. Biggins and their two-year-old son, Timothy, departed for Bay Shore, L. I., where they live, after 10 days here with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. Battle Smith, 230 North Newstead avenue, and her brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. William Logan Heckman. It was Timothy's first visit here. The two older Biggins children are Gerard and Laura.

Several of Mr. and Mrs. Smith's six children live in widely separated areas. Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Cartan Jr. (Margaret Smith), with their daughter, Catherine, and son, Frederick III, moved about a year ago from Long Island to Garden Grove, outside Los Angeles. The Gerard McMahons (Rachel Smith) are living temporarily in Midland, Mich., and the youngest of the six, Michael Smith, who is married and has a two-year-old son, Matthew, are in Rock Hill, S. C., where he is teaching English literature in Winthrop College. The other Smith children live here.

Mrs. E. Field Goltra of 4516 Maryland avenue, and her daughter, Miss Elizabeth, spent last weekend visiting Eastern preparatory schools, one of which Miss Goltra will attend.

DR. THOMAS T. HOOPES, curator of the City Art Museum, will speak Sunday at the Artists Guild after a 6 o'clock dinner in the crypt. L. Guy Blackmer will preside. After Dr. Hoopes' talk, the Harikuda Israeli dancers and singers will perform in a new series directed by Mrs. Leah Millman. The program will be given in the theater gallery. The Guild's annual water color and pastel show will be on display in the other galleries.

Miss Elizabeth Anne Conover Engaged

OF INTEREST to St. Louisans is the engagement of Miss Elizabeth Anne Conover to Harry H. Nuttle. Miss Conover is the daughter of Mrs. Peter P. H. Conover, a former St. Louisan now living at Lyford Landing Farm, Denton, Md., and the late Mr. Conover.

The wedding will take place June 17 at Lyford Landing Farm. Among St. Louisans planning to go east for the wedding are Dr. and Mrs. Joseph Franklin Trigg, close family friends.

Miss Conover was graduated from John Burroughs School and attended Sweet Briar College for two years. She received her degree in education from the National College of Education in Evanston, Ill. The bride-elect is the granddaughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. William G. Day of St. Louis and of the late Mr. and Mrs. Samuel D. Conover of Dayton, O.

Mr. Nuttle, a native of Denton, is an alumnus of Dickinson College, Carlisle, Pa.

MISS ELLEN MASON MCCARTHY, debutante daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Edward McCarthy, 3 Wickersham lane, Ladue, will spend her spring holiday from San Diego (Calif.), College for Women visiting friends in Palm Springs, Calif.

Washington Trip for Principia Girls

AMONG the 41 Principia Upper School girls leaving St. Louis Saturday, March 18, for a week's educational tour of Washington will be 16 students from the St. Louis area. They are: Miss Alinda Belz, Miss Susan Edwards, Miss Cynthia Higginbotham, Miss Clare Hill, Miss Susan Hough, Miss Mary Hughes, Miss Judith Lange, Miss Sandra Luerssen, Miss Sheila Pierce, Miss Sterling Tholen, Miss Karen Van Vleck, Miss Susan Ambrosius, Miss Mildred Harlan, Miss Camilla Cunningham, Miss Mary Freeman and Miss Helen Tanton.

The trip to Washington is an annual event under the sponsorship of the Principia School of Nations. The week includes tours to points of historical and political significance and interviews with Washington officials.

The girls, all juniors and seniors, will be accompanied by Hugh Semple, social studies instructor; Mrs. Semple, and Mrs. June Protzmann, Principia's dean of girls.

and Modern Living

by Margaret Thompson

HOW LONG DO YOUR BANKING TRANSACTIONS usually take? We checked Mercantile's Motor Banking Service recently . . . and found the average transaction took just three minutes!

That means you can make checking or saving account deposits, or take care of almost any of your usual banking needs, in less time than it takes to park your car.

That's the idea . . . you bank right at the wheel. No need even to get out of the car. And you bank at such an easily reached point—in the heart of Downtown, yet outside the heaviest traffic—at 8th and Lucas. From any of Mercantile's "drive-up" windows your transaction goes, by pneumatic tube, to the main building . . . zips back to you, and away you go.

Obviously, this service is much used by business men. They can even send company cars or messengers. But it's marvelous for a mother without a baby sitter, too . . . no keeping numerous small individuals headed in the same direction. And it's great for hurried days when you'd rather stay casually dressed. Or for this time of year, when uncertain weather can put a damper on any kind of outing.

Of course, if you can't get out at all . . . or if you're too busy even for a brief banking trip, you can still bank at Mercantile . . . by mail, postage paid both ways by the bank.

I'll be glad to tell you more about either of these "extra" banking services.

Martha Carr's OPINION

How to Ask for a Movie Date.

Today's column is just for teen-agers. If you have a problem just send it to Martha.

Dear Martha:
COULD YOU PLEASE tell me how a boy should go about asking a girl to go to an afternoon show or something like that? Should the boy ask the girl first and then ask the parents or should it be the other way around? I have known this girl a number of years off and on. Please give me and other boys like me an idea of how it should be done and what to say.

SHYLY.
You are a real gentleman to even think of asking the girl's parents for permission to take her to a show. Not many boys in this day and age are so delightfully thoughtful. I think if you just ask this girl if she would like to go to a movie with you, it will be enough. She will then ask her parents for their permission. However, it would be nice if she accepts your invitation for the two of you to ask her parents. It will please them no end, I am sure. You needn't be formal about asking the girl to go to the movie with you. Just say you'd like to take her and hope she can go.

Dear Martha:

OUR CHURCH GROUP is having a party and I told my best friend about it. She wants me to invite her. We've gone around together for years now. Whenever we are in a group together I shut up entirely. I am afraid that will happen at the church party. There will be a boy there whom I like. My girl friend can talk to boys and I fear the consequences when she meets this boy I like. Lately I have been trying to go out on my own without my girl friend and find I am able to talk to people much easier when she does not dominate the conversation. Our church will have other parties and I would like to ask my girl friend later when I have built up some self-confidence. NERVOUS AND WORRIED.

Invite your girl friend to one of the later parties. Attend the coming one alone and test out your confidence in yourself. You need to go places without this friend. You cannot go through life being overshadowed by her and letting her dominate all conversations. Best of luck to you and I know with this new determination you'll not be a wallflower even if you aren't the belle of the ball the first time out on your own.

Dear Martha:

I NEED HELP. I am in the seventh grade and my problem is in the eighth. The problem is a boy. He is five feet six inches tall and weighs about 145 pounds, all muscles, and has the biggest baby blue eyes you have ever seen. I know he liked me once but I'm not sure if he likes me now. How can I find out? KITTEN.

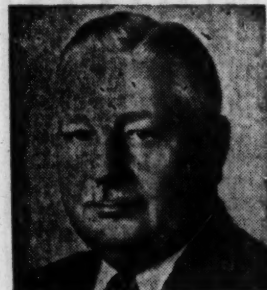

Just be patient. Eighth grade boys keep their feelings pretty much to themselves. They think it's sissy stuff to show an interest in girls. Just be matter of fact when you're around this boy. If you go kittenish on him, you'll find him looking in other directions.

Send a self-addressed stamped envelope for Martha's "Easter Egg Party," "TeenAge Games," "Answer to the Petting Question," and "Care of the Hair."

Joseph G. Molner, M.D.

Breakfast Egg Nog

DEAR DR. MOLNER: My children dislike cooked eggs for breakfast and I thought I was taking care of the situation adequately by giving them egg nog. Then I read that raw egg destroys the vitamin E in the body and that egg whites should always be cooked until firm.

DR. MOLNER has fat in it.

Also, what about nonfat and powdered milk? My husband likes powdered milk and it is a big help to the budget. My son has an adolescent skin problem so I give them non-fat vitamin milk.

I read recently that calcium in milk cannot be absorbed by the body unless adequate fat is taken in at the same time. Whole milk, of course, MRS. F.R.B.

If some youngsters don't like eggs cooked, egg nog is just as healthful. As to uncooked egg destroying vitamin E, I thoroughly doubt it—and since various foods contain vitamin E, and the body readily stores it, I can find absolutely no reason to fret a particle over whether eggs are cooked or not.

Now for the powdered milk question: The fact is that too much fat will interfere with the full absorption of calcium. Whole milk is excellently balanced, so there is no difficulty in absorbing the calcium. When you have a reason to use fat-free, fortified milk, there is no risk of the calcium's absorption being impaired.

DEAR DR. MOLNER: Is there such an illness as tuberculosis of the skin? If so, is it contagious and to what extent? L.M.

Yes, the TB germ can affect any part of the body—lungs, bones, brain, skin, etc. Fortunately tuberculosis of the skin is not a frequent condition, it responds well to treatment, and is not considered very contagious.

R.D.F.: I can't see that it makes a bit of difference whether you use scissors or clippers to cut your nails.

How to get rid of leg cramps and foot pains? The answer may be simple. Write to Dr. Molner in care of the Post-Dispatch for a copy of his leaflet, "How To Stop Leg Cramps and Foot Pains," inclosing a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and five cents in coin to cover cost of printing and handling. Dr. Molner welcomes all mail from his readers, but because of the great number received daily he is unable to answer individual letters. Dr. Molner uses readers' letters in his column whenever possible.

Bill Vaughan Says

ILLUSTRATING THE LECTURE with slides is a good idea. When things aren't going well, you can always get a laugh by putting one in upside down.

BIOLOGISTS REPORT that the pogonophore, a denizen of the ocean deep, has a brain but no mouth. The direct opposite, in other words, of the typical denizen of cocktail parties.

THE PRE-CIVIL WAR experiment with camels in the Wild West didn't catch on, and it's probably just as well. Some of the movie and TV heroes have trouble enough riding a horse.

Oops and Downs in Skiing

By Bernard Gavzer

MOUNT SNOW, Vt.
March 10 (AP).

THERE IS an invisible bug which, like the abominable snowman, lives in high, cold places and begins to bite with the first frost.

Its victims manifest bizarre symptoms. They dig through mothballs for long underwear, sweaters and woolen socks, cover themselves like monks with hooded jackets, pull on ankle-hugging pants, encase their feet in double boots and plant the accumulated result on two slats about four inches wide and seven feet long.

They are called skiers, from an old Norse word meaning "What do you want to do, live forever?"

Curious about the species, I recently joined a wave of these curiously clad creatures—moving with jolly determination like lemmings to the sea—and soon found myself deposited upon the slopes of this resort in the foothills of the Green Mountains.

I had come only to watch. But a Canadian instructor, of undaunted courage and singular persuasiveness, convinced me that he had put aside, just for me, a slope so gentle that water seeps upward. It looked to me, however, like one of the hidden peaks of the Himalayas.

Words cannot describe what happened to me in the first blast off. Other symbols, however, might suffice such as those found on any typewriter: (), /, \, S, /, V, \, O/O, &.

() So, all right, my legs are bowed.

// The way I headed my skis across the slope.

S The track I intended making on the way down.

/I The stem Christie, as shown by my instructor.

V The way I did it.

O/O Opps, lost a ski, but the poles held me up.

X& Wow, what a flop!

!&Z "&X"&Z! Somebody help me up.

SKIING has its pleasanter aspects. One of them is that you automatically join a gregarious, convivial group of some two or three million who call themselves skiers. You may not ski again for 10 years, perhaps never, but you'll always call yourself a skier. Thousands become initiated every year. There are as many different skiers as there are different colored parkas, and all of them, both the skiers and the parkas, seemed to be among the 10,000 who invaded this resort one weekend. They ranged from A to Z, from the Adirondacks to the Zugspitze.

Type A—The gay young thing who glides out of the base lodge ski shop togged in a genuine seal parka ($192.50), Austrian stretch pants ($48.50), Swedish pullover ($25), West German turtleneck jersey ($3.95), hinged back slalom ski boots ($86), thermal underwear ($9.45), American metal skis ($117.50), Swiss poles ($14.50), tinted goggles ($3.95). She gets on her skis, just long enough for a few snapshots, and is next seen beside the steaming swimming pool in a skin-tight knitted bathing suit ($39.95).

Type Z—The migratory ski bum in $3 pre-shrunk dungarees, 13-year-old racing boots, army fatigue hat and a cold sandwich tucked into his war-surplus parka. He moves in packs with the other bums and skis as though the snow will vanish by morning. He often has red, chapped hands from washing pots and pans for his keep, and a bright red nose, from over-exertion both outdoors and in.

BETWEEN A AND Z, you find such skiers as:

The athletic couple riding down the slope on a single pair of skis; the girl who groans "I feel like a duck in snowshoes."

What is the magic or the madness that brings these people together in the freezing cold of the forbidding mountains?

Winston Lauder, 31-year-old skier-entrepreneur who is one of the owners of Mount Snow as well as the plush Snow Mountain Inn—explains:

"Take any other sport that a man can do in solitude—sailing, skindiving, even parajumping—and you still find something lacking. Skiing is like flying with an airplane. It has speed and grace and elegance. Most of all, it's a supreme way for a man to test himself in uncomplicated pure terms. It is a man alone on a mountain, facing a little danger that makes it exciting and thrilling."

Skiing also attracts the sort of person who goes to the theater because he likes the intermissions. These are the non-skiers who dress in the smartest ski fashion as though they've just schussed out of color advertisements, whisky glasses in hand. The only danger they face is scorching by a hot today.

When not actually skiing, skiers talk about skiing. The roaring blaze in the mammoth fireplace, the clinking glasses, the cozy warmth of woody lodges make for easy familiarity and constant chatter. Samples:

"I've been skiing three years and my legs always got cold," said a young man in horn-rimmed glasses, "I just found out you need longjohns."

A gray-at-the-temple Frenchman to a flush-faced Denverite, who kept nodding in agreement: "Out, this is fine but it is all there is in the East. In the Alps, you ski above the timberline. How can you feel free when there are trees surrounding you?"

A crewcut Dartmouth junior looked up from his copy of "Mainsprings of Civilization" to gripe that "the trouble is there are too many people and it's going to get worse if the short ski catches on. Anybody'll be able to ski then. They'll need traffic lights on the slopes."

"WEDELN," DEAR," a man patiently explained to his bride, who wore a corsage on her sweater. "It's a German word. It means wagging, like a dog's tail. The tails of your skis are supposed to move in a wiggle, or maybe it's a waggle."

There's also romance in the rarefied mountain air, and lodge owners learn to take the results philosophically, as one did recently when the boys hammered a hole through the wall of their dormitory to greet the girls next door. "They don't mean no harm," the owner reasoned.

The true ski addict belongs to the follow-the-snow set, since he often starts out without knowing exactly where he will go. The decision is finally made on the basis of the latest snow report. This puts a premium on bed space, which can run anywhere from $21 a night in a posh lodge to a cot in a bunkhouse operated by a shrewd, old Vermonter, who says "I give 'em a cot, soap and plenty of hot water—no mattresses or towels—for two and a quarter a night, and I get 25-30 of 'em every blessed weekend."

One ingenious young man whose status may someday be carved in ice on a mountainside, solved the housing problem with a classic gambit. Turned down in one place after another, he finally found a spot where he got a clean, crisp bed and tender, loving care. It was a hospital.

There are many things to be said about skiing, but—wouldn't you know it?—a bearded beatnik said it best:

"Man, it's like there ain't nothing else. That fleece comes down from Big Papa's pillows, I gotta make it—like there's nothing else. You dig? I mean man, how can you pace a pad when you can move, I mean move!"

Uncle Ray's Column

Increasing Man's Lifespan

Uncle Ray awards a set of the World Book Encyclopedia to the fifth grade, Mahan Attendance Center, Mahan, Miss. Pupils of fourth through twelfth grades would you like to help your school class win a 20-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia? Uncle Ray is giving awards to classrooms for the best groups of questions sent to him in care of the Post-Dispatch. Your teacher should select the five best questions asked by pupils on such subjects as science, history, biography or geography.

By Ramon Coffman

A QUESTION that is a little startling has come from a sixth grade pupil:

"How come we don't live for 300 years or so?"

The answer, as of today, is that people seem to be short of whatever is needed to keep on living to such an age.

The average life span has increased during the past 2000 years. There were people who grew old in ancient times, but the average life was short. This was due largely to high infant mortality and to diseases of the epidemic type.

The ancient Romans left some figures about the length of their lives. They indicate that the average Roman lived less than 30 years.

What a change has come since then! The average lifetime has more than doubled in Europe and North America. In a few countries, the life span has increased a bit beyond 70 years.

If the human race keeps in-

It is believed by some that large turtles sometimes reach an age from 200 to 300 years.

creasing the life span at the same rate as during the past 2000 years, the average man and woman will live about 150 years after 2000 more years go by.

The increase in the life span has been greatest during the past few hundred years. If the rate of increase since the time of Shakespeare goes on, the average life span will pass 200 years inside of the next 2000 years!

Steps have been taken toward preparing "artificial organs" for human beings. The best progress has come in making substitute hearts for use during heart operations.

If long-lasting artificial hearts are made and are "installed" in people with success, the human life span will increase—perhaps to 3000 years!

For general interest section of your scrapbook.

Free: "Five South American Republics" is the name of a leaflet that tells interesting facts about our neighbors to the south. For your copy send a stamped self-addressed envelope to Uncle Ray in care of the Post-Dispatch.
